Hard-Shell Convention at Syracuse.

HARMONIOUS ORGANIZATION.

Resolutions and Address to the People

NO COALITION FOR PUBLIC PLUNDER.

SYRACUSE, Tuesday, Aug. 21—11 A. M.

A preliminary meeting took place at 8 o'clock this morning, Mr. Bascom, of Kings, County, Chairman, and Messrs. Lyons, of Oneida, and Coon, of Washington, Secretaries. The following officers were agreed upon to be presented to the Convention: Assembly Bowen, for temporary Chairman; Hon. S. V. Hayes, of Albany, and Dr. Spencer, of Chautauqua, for temporary Secretaries.

SYRACUSE—10 A. M.

A. H. Lyons called the Convention to order, and moved that Assembly Bowen be temporary Chairman. Carried.

Mr. Lyons moved that Messrs. Hawkins and Bell be appointed a Committee to wait upon Mr. Bowen and inform him of his election.

Mr. Lyons presented an amendment, that the Convention adjourn on the Fourth of July next. Amendment was not acted upon.

A motion was carried, and Mr. Bowen took the chair.

Mr. Hawkins and Wilbur were appointed Secretaries.

Mr. Bowen, on taking the Chair, congratulated the Convention upon their prospects, and said that principles were those upon which the Union is based and by which the Union is preserved. He doubted that the Democratic party were now and ever had been against sumptuary laws, and against distinction on account of birthplace. [Laughter.]

It was then moved that a Committee of eight be appointed by the Chair to select permanent officers for the Convention. Carried.

The following Committee was appointed: Messrs. of Oneida, Lyons; of Onondaga, Burlew; of Orange, Bowman; of Kings, Bergen; of Livingston, Wheeler; of Erie, Roberts; of Chautauqua, Wilcox; of New-York, Lewis; of Saratoga, Bockes; of Rensselaer, Ferguson; of Washington, Wilson; of Westchester, Bell; of Kings, Bergen; of Livingston, Wheeler; of Erie, Roberts; of Chautauqua, Wilcox; of New-York, and Suffolk, of Westchester, both claiming seats, Messrs. Spencer, Nadow, Teggan, Fowler and Rose, were appointed a Committee to decide between them.

The Convention then adjourned to 2 o'clock.

Out of 129 members, about 110 were in attendance.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. Bennett, of the Committee on Contested Seats, reported in favor of admitting both Van and Bowman as members of the Convention. Adopted.

Mr. Bowen, of Orange, reported the following list of permanent officers of the Convention:

PRESIDENT, HENRY W. BOGARDUS, of Erie.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

E. Corlis, New-York	William Lewis, Orange,
E. C. Ellsworth, Kings,	Lyman Sewell, Chemung,
J. Grant, Rensselaer,	S. B. Parker, Genesee,
J. Van Ness, Saratoga,	A. S. Barnes, Wyoming,
John A. Bailey, Albany,	G. F. Allen, New-York,
T. C. Spencer, St. Lawrence,	E. E. Cleveland, Delaware.

SECRETARIES.

James Nesbit.

The report was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Bockes on taking the Chair apologized for the lack of parliamentary knowledge, and said—It would be our duty to review and perhaps reform our political platform, and show that we are a living, moving, national Democratic party, based on the principles of the Constitution, and the principles of the Democratic party. Let us be one and united, we invite those who agree with us on principle with us—let us reject with scorn every proposition to coalesce with any faction for public plunder. Let our motto be, "Union for public good, no coalition for spoils." If differences of opinion or thinking of views arise, let there be moderation, conciliation, and forbearance—let the Convention stand by its principles, and so act as to show that the National Democratic party still live, and that the Council fires still burn. Let us be adhere to our principles as to insure, or at least deserve, success.

Mr. Ward, of New-York, moved the appointment of a committee of one from each Judicial District, to report resolutions.

Mr. D. E. Sickles moved to amend by inserting "two" instead of "one."

The amendment was discussed by Messrs. Ward, Cushing, Sickles and Clark, and was lost by 57 to 53.

Mr. Ward's motion was then passed, and the following members were appointed on said committee: First District, General Ward; Second District, C. F. Tallmadge; Third District, S. J. Gourlay; Fourth District, J. C. Spencer; Fifth District, J. A. Greene; Sixth District, Geo. Bartlett; Seventh District, S. H. Parker; Eighth District, E. H. Benton.

Mr. Fowler, of Orange, moved the appointment of a Committee of eight to prepare and report an address. Carried.

The following Committee was then nominated: First District, W. A. Tenney; Second, S. Fowler; Third, M. Hoey; Fourth, Greville Clark; Fifth, H. Bell; Sixth, F. M. Whitman; Seventh, H. W. Hyde; Eighth, H. N. Hughes.

Gen. Clark declined serving on the Committee, and was excused, and J. Bloop was appointed in his place.

The Convention then took a recess until 7 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

General Ward, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following:

Resolved, That the National Democratic Party of New-York hereby reassert their adherence and devotion to the principles of the National Democracy and of the Constitution, and they adhere to, and sustain in theory and practice, the resolutions of the Democratic National Conventions of 1848 and 1852, as containing the true principles of the Democratic party of the Union. They reaffirm them with hearty good-will, believing that time and experience have demonstrated their purity and soundness, and the necessity for a strict adherence thereto.

Resolved, That the lessons of the Fathers of Democracy teach frugality and economy in the administration of our affairs, and that we adhere to them as unerring guides of Democratic faith.

[illegible] the Democratic party of the Union, and that we hold the Democratic doctrine of State Rights to be the conservation of the Constitution, and the safeguard of our institutions, and that the peace and quiet of the country cannot exist if it shall be left to the people of the Union, in the exercise of their sovereignty in the Territories, to decide the local question, involving the rightness of slavery, in the end, that a subject so disturbing in its nature and character, may be wholly excluded from the scene of the Government of the Union.

Resolved, That the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty is opposed to all sound Democratic principles, and that the first principle of a free Government demands that every individual citizen, in all matters of public concern, shall be guaranteed the rights of freedom, of religious faith and worship, established in our State and Federal Constitutions, that he is the foundation of our National Union and prosperity—that any attempt to abridge the privileges secured to citizens of foreign nations, and overturn the rights and guarantees to adopted citizens, is a violation of the Constitution, and ought to be resisted as antagonistic to the genius of republican institutions—and that we, as Democrats, recognize no exclusion of liberty or merit, no distinction of birth or religious creed, inconsistent in the minds of the Democracy, with the principles and the great doctrines of the Democratic faith, and to uphold and enforce, in practice and in address, the principles of justice and liberty.

Resolved, That we regard the Prohibitory Liquor Act of the Legislature of this State as the last and most [illegible] of the Constitution of the State, but we do not hesitate to declare that it is a violation of the rights of property, and that the repeal is, in our opinion, [illegible]

Resolved, That we agree in principle upon the subject of the Nebraska bill, and that we, as Democrats, [illegible] the principles of the Democratic party, and that we, as Democrats, [illegible] the principles of the Democratic party, and that we, as Democrats, [illegible] the principles of the Democratic party

LETTERS FROM L. KOSSUTH.

INTERESTING DOCUMENTS.

Progress of European Affairs—The War and the United States.

A Letter from Gov. Kossuth to the President.

LONDON, FRIDAY, AUG. 10, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: Your able London correspondent will have informed you of the few incidents that have occurred in the course of the week. All of them are rather of a symptomatic character.

The claymoredness of L. N. BONAPARTE preserved him from a new PRATORY at Biarritz.—The Bourbon-Orleans-fusionist leaders are assembling about Northumberland-street in London—ORNANBEIRE, LAMORICIERE, BEDEAU, THIERS, MOLE, GUIZOT; it is quite a congress.—Some letters found upon Gen. ELIOT disclose the connection of the Comte de CHAMBORD (Henry V. in imaginary virtuality) with the Carlist plots in Spain, supported by Russian gold. These latter disclosures compel the Spanish Government to pay the King of Portugal-bye, for getting rid of some unpleasant refugees.—(NAPOLEON the Great has charged them that, by his expedition to Hayti.) It is true the Cortes are yet wanted to vote the money, but there is no possibility of whipping to a sufficient number of the members who will great pains be taken to get some say their absence is a good excuse for escaping a negative vote. In Naples King BOMBA writhes mad. His madness of course is of bloody nature,—he applies the bastinado indiscriminately to everybody who happens to be remembered by him. The Murattists, "not a little alarmed," on the other hand, are very busy; the ministers of King BOMBA apply to Austria for help in case of need; Austria is sending reinforcements to Italy; and even the London Times looks alarmed, like a steerer without a compass. They speak of Alliances in favor of Russia in Italy, and when Turkey the Ally, and alone MAZZINI, whom England should rather conciliate, if they really fear anything from Austria there;—and Lord JOHN RUSSELL speaks Italy in the Commons; nobody can understand with what intention, to what purpose; and PALMERSTON provokes serious attention. But in the meantime Prince JOSEPH of Austria and BOMBA exchange autograph letters, by special messengers; and they assure the world that all is right with them; and the English Ministers swear to it by command from Paris, though somewhat with a sigh; and encourage for a little diversion to the public mind, a Polish meeting in the Czartoriesky line; but it is evening—a decidedly pure English one—and though as it was, voices them (the Ministers & Co.) an emphatic vote of distrust.

Such are the checkered incidents of the week. Add to them the paralytic languor in the military operations, evidently betraying the secret that something is brewing in the darker recesses of diplomacy, that does not wish to be disturbed by the clash of arms, the result of which is dubious;—and then say whether the signs of the time are not indicative of stranger events than may be thought of in many a man's philosophy, either in London or even at—Washington.

It is much to be wished in the interest of the civilized world in general, and of the Republican principle, as promulgated in the United States in particular, that public opinion in Europe should awaken to the understanding, on the one hand, that the present complications in Europe are too comprehensive in bearing for the United States to be justified in looking at them merely as spectators at a drama, in which they have no concern, except that of pastime and momentary excitation; on the other hand to the understanding that, in these complications, we are by far not yet even at the real beginning,—all that has come to pass, and all that is passing, is nothing yet but an introductory prologue; consequently, that though the inconceivable prudence of the Cabinet at Washington should have cast away an opportunity for elevating Republican America to the position almost of an umpire in the destinies of mankind—an opportunity, such as Providence itself does but seldom grant to the darlings of its choicest favors—still, the future is not yet foreclosed irretrievably,—rather such are the circumstances, that much might yet be done in the course of the strange events that are coming to pass.

But then the first step to the better in my opinion is, to arouse the constituted authorities from their drowsy, petrified indifference, of which they are conspicuous to an extent surpassing long-nation.

The cause of Democracy and the principle of human liberty has, up to this time, derived little or no advantage abroad from the existence of the great Republic in the West. However, up to General PIERCE's accession to office, there was at least no want of occasional manifestations of those friendly feelings, and of that sympathy, which though barren in themselves, had still at least a cheering effect: but I am sorry to say, we have been denied even this past-a-days; denied it to the extent sometimes infringing on the very rules of common, gentlemanlike civility.

I remember to have seen it reported in your paper, that when the late Mr. WEBSTER never neglected to meet with the friendliest countenance, and to answer with frank and obliging civility, any communication I have addressed to him, in his official capacity, the worse the present Administration thought proper to adopt was widely different. This is perfectly true; so much so that I am sorry to say, even Ministers of certain monarchical, aristocratical countries might serve for an example to certain Republican Ministers for the future to follow. Your country, Sir, enjoys the advantage of publicity even with regard to diplomatic transactions; I think, therefore, that I not only shall not become guilty of indiscretion, but will rather pay a due tribute to the mysterious character of your institutions, by reporting through your paper the following fact.

Acting upon precedent dating from my conversation with the late lamented Mr. WEBSTER, in just a year ago, (August, 1854,) desired to submit a humble memorial to his Excellency President PIERCE. Anxious to make myself sure that there was nothing either in the contents or in the form of my application which might be considered either inappropriate or inconsistent with any customary rules, I submitted my memorial to the judgment of Mr. BUCHANAN, the venerable representative of the United States at this Court, requesting him to take upon himself the forwarding of it to his Government, in case he should judge it proper and consistent with the receiver incumbent on his position. Mr. BUCHANAN, (I take great pleasure in acknowledging it publicly with gratefulness,) having examined as well the contents, as what the form of my memorial, (of which he retained a copy,) not only gave me the assurance that he felt it perfectly consistent with the dignity of his position to submit my memorial officially to his Excellency the President of the United States, but thought himself besides authorized to recommend it to his prompt and favorable consideration. And so he did, and I thank him herewith publicly for it. But I regret to have to say that no answer has been returned from Washington up to this very day; not so much as a simple acknowledgment of its receipt! I desire to place the document before the public of your country, and will, therefore, close my letter by requesting you to publish it in the columns of your esteemed journal, as annexed.

I have the honor, &c. L. KOSSUTH.

Memorial of Gov. Kossuth to the President of the United States.

LONDON, August, 1854.

His Excellency General Franklin Pierce, President of the United States:

MR. PRESIDENT: When, invited by the Congress and Government of the United States, I visited Washington at the close of 1851, I was honored with a solemn official reception by both Houses of Congress, and with an official presentation to the President of the United States by the then Acting Secretary of State; having, in general terms—as it is customary on such occasions—established the public character of my position, and defined my object before His Excellency, the President, himself, I then addressed a communication to the Secretary of State, the late lamented DANIEL WEBSTER, requesting to be told in what way, during my presence at Washington, or on any future occasion, I would be at liberty to communicate with the United States Government, upon matters touching the public interests of my nation? To which request I had the honor of receiving the assurance of the Secretary of State, that any communication I might make, be it verbally or in writing, either directly to His Excellency, the President, or to the Secretary of State, or even to himself (the Secretary of State) through the medium of an agent I might appoint for the purpose, would, at any time, be acknowledged, taken in due consideration, and answered with promptitude.

Accordingly, besides some written communications, I had the honor of several interviews with the Honorable Secretary of State, in which questions of the highest importance to my country were considered in contemplation of future emergencies, and though I had not the good fortune to see all my requests conceded, still, I have thankfully to acknowledge that in regard to several of them I was favored with positive assurances that were entirely satisfactory.

Amongst these latter there was one of an essentially important character, to which, upon these antecedents, I take the liberty of asking permission, respectfully to invite the attention of your Excellency.

It has always been a standard principle of the United States to recognise every de facto Government.

In no case have the United States been found acting with more pleasure upon that principle than when they had been called upon by the national exertions of a people engaged in a struggle for independence similar to their own, to greet one member more in the great family of nations.

The timely recognition of the former Spanish colonies is a proof that the United States did not consider it to be a condition to such recognition, that the struggle should be entirely over, and the independent position of the new State agreed to by the antagonist power. It has been deemed sufficient that a people should formally declare its independence; that it should have established a de facto Government, and proved its vitality by keeping up the contest, so as to make it unlikely that the antagonist party could succeed in subduing it by its own forces.

And really this line of policy appears to be consonant as well with the history of the United States, as with a due regard to principles.

The independence of the United States was anything but achieved when it was acknowledged by France.

And the principle upon which such a recognition rests, is a due regard paid to the sovereign right of every nation, to determine its own form of government, and to regulate its own domestic concerns.

But the possible ultimate issue of a struggle is neither a matter of principle, nor does it concern the recognizing power. All this power has to consider is, whether there be a declaration of national independence, and a de facto Government in effective activity.

Knowing this to be the maxim upon which the United States always professed to act, the Hungarian nation, struggling victoriously for its independence in the year 1849, expected with perfect confidence to see its independence promptly recognized by the Government of the United States.

This our expectation was perfectly legitimate.

Hungary was not incompetently or adventurously intruding itself into the family of independent nations.

It had been a self consisting, independent state through the lapse of a thousand years.

In all the vicissitudes of this long period, while nations vanished and empires fell, the separate standing and independence of Hungary were never disputed. It was recognized by all the Powers of the earth. It was sanctioned by treaties with the Hapsburg dynasty, when this dynasty, by the free will of my nation, which acted as one of the two contracting parties, was invested with the kingly crown of Hungary. The independent condition of this Kingdom was admitted to be a part of the international law of Europe, and was guaranteed by several European Governments and nations. This independent condition of Hungary is clearly defined in one of our fundamental laws, (the 12th article of the year 1791,) in these terms: "Hungary is a free and independent Kingdom, having its own separate existence and Constitution, and not subject to any other nation or country in the world." And it is added in these very laws that "all we owe to Austria are the obligations of good neighborhood, and nothing else." Our country never made, nor was intended to make, a part of the Austrian Empire.

Such was the legal condition of Hungary, which FRANCIS JOSEPH of Austria attempted to overthrow by arms, declaring the independence, the Constitution, and the very existence of Hungary abolished, and the country absorbed in the Austrian Empire.

To this attack we answered by victoriously driving his armies out of the country; and to his declaration we answered by declaring our country to constitute a free sovereign State, and by deposing, dethroning, and banishing the House of Hapsburg Lorraine.

We thus not so much established a new claim as rather reasserted an ancient right.

The declaration of our independence was attested by every mark of a universal national will. It was not only unanimously voted by both Houses of Congress, but every county, every department, every municipality, all over the land, solemnly proclaimed its consent and adherence to it.

I beg leave to enclose herewith a copy of the concluding paragraphs of this document.

Your Excellency will see from it

1. That a formal declaration of national independence was issued.

2. That a regular national Government was legally and formally instituted,—and thus the two fundamental conditions fulfilled of a claim to a formal recognition from the United States of America.

As to the third consideration, which is rather one of expediency—that is, whether we were likely to maintain our independence, and whether it was evident that Austria was incapable of subduing us by its own forces—I need not point to our victories in several consecutive pitched battles, or to our having cleared our territory from the enemy, as we have the most perceptory evidence in the fact that the House of Austria saw itself forced to resort to the aid of a foreign Government, by asking and accepting the armed assistance of one of the most powerful potentates on earth, the Czar of Russia, who, in his turn, thought it necessary to send a mighty army of nearly two hundred thousand men to cooperate with the forces of Austria against us.

This fact implies an absolute and categorical public confession on the part of Austria, that it is impossible for her to subdue Hungary by her own force.

I believe, therefore, that under such circumstances, Hungary was fully entitled to expect a speedy recognition of its independence from the United States.

It is true that preliminary steps were taken in this direction, a diplomatic agent having been appointed by the United States Government with a view to his proceeding to Hungary, as I was informed by regular rumors. But the long moments of this experiment, the want of decisive instructions, the delays caused by the distance across the Atlantic, and by the necessity of sending over the required information, and waiting for a subsequent definitive authorization, prevented our nation from receiving the contemplated moral support of a formal recognition of our independence.

That delay proved fatal—it turned out to be a death-blow to Hungary.

I have every reason to say, that if the political situation of Hungary could have been at an early moment strengthened by a recognition from the United States, the occidental powers of Europe could not have persisted in disregarding the gigantic struggle on the banks of the Danube; they could not have remained silent at the armed intervention of Russia in Hungary; and from all the cautiousness which Russia, before throwing her numerous armies upon us, employed in ascertaining that no regard was paid to the crisis of the Hungarian nation by any power on earth, we have abundant reason to believe, that a recognition from the United States, followed as it certainly would have been by a protest from England and France against the intervention of Russia, or at least by an offer of mediation by one of them, would have in all probability prevented that interrention, which was not only the grossest violation of the laws of nations, but also has practically overthrown the balance of power in Europe, as is manifest from the present complications in the East, which are but a logical result emanating from that intervention in Hungary.

But the delays which I have recited proved disastrous to Hungary, yet in another sense. The stronger the nation relied upon being recognized by, at least the United State of America, the more despondency spread over the spirit of the nation in seeing itself disappointed in that hope. That was the instrument in the hands of treason to work out the ruin of my Fatherland. Pointing on the one side to the numerous armies of Russia pouring down upon us; on the other side, to the complete abandonment which we experienced from the rest of the world; treason succeeded in undermining the confidence of our armies in the correctness of my political calculation, and imbued them with the sentiment that, foreaken as we were, all vigor and all sacrifices were in vain. Thus only could Hungary have been subdued even by Russia. With an American chargé d'affaires arriving in Hungary, bringing us the acknowledgment of the efficacy of our national efforts, treason never would have found a field for its poisonous work; and without treason Hungary either could not have been subdued, or, at least, certainly would have been able to prolong the struggle so as to render the diplomatic mediation of England and France unavoidable.

Lastly, these delays extended their fatal influence even to the bloody period of Austrian vengeance, after our fall. A formal recognition from a great foreign power would have imparted to the contest a character so entirely different from a rebellion, which Austria contrived to fix upon our war of Independence, that the simple fact of a preceding recognition from the United States must have saved the bravest of my brave countrymen from being sacrificed by scores on the scaffolds of Austria. In Italy the delay in the recognition of the Roman Republic had quite an analogous effect. It rendered possible the intervention of France, and the subsequent cruelties of the Papal Government, reinstalled by foreign arms.

Having thus demonstrated the fatal consequences of the mode of proceeding adopted in those former instances, I took the liberty to invite the attention of the late Secretary of State to the difficulties of a speedy communication between the Southern and Eastern parts of Europe and the United States, to the time which must be inevitably lost if, on a future similar emergency, either no diplomatic agents be appointed in good time, or if obliged first to report home and ask for fresh instructions before action; and as the condition of Europe made it then already quite evident that the occurrence of a new effort on the part of the oppressed nationalities was not at all hypothetical, but rather simply reduced to a question of time and opportunity, I asked leave to recommend to the generous consideration of the Government of the United States that similar causes may have thus again similar effects, and any national and Democratic movement on the Continent of Europe might again be deprived of the practical benefit of a sympathizing policy on the part of the United States. Therefore, I concluded by respectfully asking that, "Whenever the general political aspect of Europe, or any particular emergency will, in the estimation of the Cabinet of Washington, authorize the belief, that a new effort on the part of the oppressed nationalities may be impending, the United States Government should be pleased to appoint confidentially some diplomatic agent in view of such emergency, and to entrust him with the necessary powers for carrying out in due time the beneficent intentions of his Government."

To this, my humble request, the late Secretary of State condescended to give me with emphatic precision the following answer: that he felt perfectly authorized in giving me the most positive assurance, "that should either a partial rising of a serious character happen in Europe, or a war break out between some of the European Governments, in which it appeared likely that Austria might become implicated, and especially if it should be a war affecting the Oriental question, the Government of the United States, fully aware of the precarious and volcanic condition of the European continent, would take such an emergency for a sure indication, that it might be attended by a new effort on the part of the oppressed nationalities, and chiefly of Hungary, Italy and Poland, and that in view of such emergency no time should be lost in appointing a diplomatic agent, and in sending him over to Europe, so that he might be near at hand, and that he would be invested with the necessary powers to enter into open diplomatic relations with any de facto Government, which, upon the basis of a declaration of national independence, he should see exercising a real territorial authority, becoming an actual Government."

Mr. President—Of all the advantages which I humbly endeavored to secure to the future of my heroic nation, this declaration of the distinguished statesman, given to me in his official capacity as Secretary of State, was the most cheering and the most satisfactory. It consoled my heart for many sorrowful disappointments; it acted, and is acting, like an electric fluid upon the spirits of Hungary and Italy.

Consistently with these antecedents, and profoundly impressed with the anticipation of the dreadful results of any possible disappointment in our expectation of seeing the moral support of a prompt recognition imparted to Hungary, Italy or Poland, asserting anew their independence—I feel prompted by the urgency of the obvious condition of Europe, respectfully to bring once more this vital subject under the wise and generous consideration of your Excellency, and to solicit a prompt decision, which, I confidently trust, will be such as we are led to expect from the nature of the institutions of the United States, from their history, and from the high-minded liberality of its Government.

May it please your Excellency to consider that the political condition of Europe has reached that point which, in the estimation of the late Secretary of State, would indicate that a new effort for independence by some of the European nationalities is near at hand.

The Oriental question has broken out into a war, just as from a knowledge of the state of things I foretold while yet in America.

Hostilities have been actually declared between Russia on one side, and Turkey, England and France on the other.

It is evident that matters having come to that point, it is utterly impossible for Austria to maintain any longer an undefined position in regard to the struggle waged in her immediate neighborhood, and derranging her political situation.

Pressed as she is from both sides, and from the imperious necessities of her position, her decisive declaration is daily, almost hourly expected.

And whatever decision she may make, it will be followed immediately by a national movement in some quarter of her heterogeneous dominions.

Whether she side with Russia, or with the Western Powers, or if even permitted to keep a neutral attitude, (which is not to be imagined,) her finances must be, at all events, engaged in certain quarters; and being so engaged, she cannot help exposing an opposite weak quarter to her oppressed nationalities, which, in solid combination, are watching this inevitable opportunity.

This is as true, that I beg leave to assure your Excellency that a serious collision between the belligerent powers, the moment Austria shall define her position, cannot fail to become the word of command which is to initiate the new contest for liberty.

It would be neither appropriate nor consistent with the regard due to the position of your Excellency on my part, that I should enter into particulars, but so much I beg permission to say, that, in all human probability, this my humble memorial will reach your Excellency sooner to be placed in the hands of your Excellency before the anticipated development of the situation of Europe will be marked by a phase having claims to the sympathies of Republican America.*

The Polish insurrection, the Manifestation of which with the others is evident, can already be regarded as at war with Russia, the Turkish Government having already officially accepted the mediation of the Polish emigration, and is now organizing Polish auxiliary legions, which, by a single victory of the Allied Powers over the Russians may be brought to bear upon the Polish provinces immediately.

In a word, such is the actual condition of affairs in Europe, that it becomes my imperative duty to endeavor to ascertain whether it be the intention of your Excellency to afford the benefit of an early recognition to Hungary, Poland or Italy, in case they or some of them succeed in reestablishing effectively a de facto National Government? And whether we may hope that your Excellency will in your wisdom find it opportune to make now those preliminary dispositions which have been spoken of in my official interview with the late Secretary of State of the United States?

I hope your Excellency will allow me to remark that an uncertainty in this regard, by exposing us to erroneous anticipations, may have a very mischievous effect upon our cause.

There is yet one other point which I beg permission to touch upon.

It refers to the commercial and maritime intercourse between the United States and the contending parties in the event of a revolutionary movement in Hungary or Italy. Will American ships be protected in carrying on trade with such ports as may be in the possession of the insurgents?

It need hardly be observed, in assigning the motives for this inquiry, that when a state of war is contemplated, it being of the utmost importance to those engaged in commercial pursuits to know in advance the extent to which they may depend upon the protection of their own Government, it is usual to put hypothetical cases before the Executive, and ask what will be done in given contingencies. This foreknowledge is indispensable to merchants, and hence I may suggest that an early decision upon this point may be of great value to persons engaged in American trade; but most especially is it of high and commanding importance to the people of Hungary and Italy, because, if once assured of free trade with the people of the United States during their approaching struggle, it is a virtual guarantee that through the enterprise of American merchants and the unquestionable acquiescence of Austria in any decision upon this point which may be promulgated by the United States, the Republican party in Hungary and Italy would enjoy the precious advantage of receiving, by means of American ships, abundant supplies of food, clothing and all the necessaries of life. This class of inquiries are almost of daily occurrence at this moment in Europe, and in no instance do the Governments, whether neutral or belligerent, refuse a prompt and positive reply.

The necessity of having this important matter defined by positive regulations, will become more imperative as the theatre of hostilities will be seen extended, and the war of ambition as it is now, will have assumed the shape of a war of principles.

It is a prevalent opinion with many of the European nations, (mine among the rest,) that the United States would never permit their commercial relations to be suspended or limited by the fact that a nation has taken up arms against their oppressors; but that if we can offer an unblockaded port, we may in honor and good faith invite the citizens of the United States to trade with us, though we be yet engaged in a struggle, and though our independence be not yet recognized.

To this opinion we had been led by the fact, that during the war between Spain and the Colonies, the United States gave such an interpretation to their neutral position, offering equal facilities of trade, without any restriction, to both belligerent parties. And further: because we know it is the United States which have established the principle that "free ships make free goods."†

I will then, in conclusion, venture to ask:

1. Whether in the event of a revolutionary contest in Hungary and Italy, American ships will be permitted, under the laws of the United States, to clear for ports in the possession of the insurgents?

And, 2. Whether such ships will be exempt from search or seizure on the high seas by Austrian vessels of war?

Humbly recommending the contents of this my memorial to the liberal consideration of your Excellency, I have the honor to be, with the highest regards and the most distinguished consideration, &c.,

L. KOSSUTH,
Late Governor-President of Hungary.

* This was written before the expedition to the Crimea, by which the allied powers removed the theatre of war from the neighborhood of Austria, and thus relieved her from the pressure that would undoubtedly have forced her at the first serious conflict between Russia and the Allies on the Danube, to become a party to the conflict. The distancing of the war from her frontiers is the fact which allowed her to keep an undefined position up to the very moment. It was unwise in Russia to anticipate that the Allied Powers would prefer not to defend their enemy, rather than put Austria under a stress. They have to rue it sadly enough; but sooner or later Austria cannot escape the necessity of a decision;—and that moment will justify the anticipation expressed in the text.

† The original draft contained here the following paragraph:

"Yet I learn from an official public declaration of the English Government, dated 28th March, that though England be willing to make some temporary allowances from the strict interpretation of what it calls the rigor of recognized usages of war; still it maintains the right of search over neutral flags, though with the limitation to extend it only to the search of contraband of war, and of conveyance of the officers and dispatches of the enemy. Still this does manifestly imply the right of search over the neutral flag; and as if this interpretation be accepted by the United States, it will certainly be acted upon likewise by other European Governments, the commerce of the citizens of the United States with ourselves in the course of our anticipated struggle, may turn out not to be protected against being searched by an Austrian cruiser on the high sea. The inconvenience arising from such an uncertainty is obvious."

This section, however, has been rescinded, from the motive that an understanding has just been come to between the American Minister and Lord CLARENDON, with regard to the rights of neutral commerce, which (I am sorry to say) admitted the right of search. The writer of this letter was anxious to have it put in such a shape, that the American Minister should have nothing to object to it; he therefore preferred to rescind the section, and thus to insure the full concurrence of the Minister, which in fact was freely granted without the slightest reserve.

Governor Hunt's Letter in Niagara County.

LOCKPORT, Thursday, Aug. 16, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: The perusal of Gov. HUNT's letter, lately published in your paper, cannot fail, with his immediate constituents, to call up recollections of passages in his past political history, and afford occasion to the Governor's political opponents to reaffirm their charges of want of sincerity and consistency in his political course—charges which were made when he left the Democratic party and joined the Whigs. That change they attributed to an overweening ambition for office, although the Governor then professed to be actuated by patriotic motives. In that change the chrysalis process was so slow and imperceptible, that in an election to Congress he got the votes of many Democrats, who acted on the assurance that he was an unchanged Democrat. Elected to Congress and taking a prominent rank in the Whig party, he so adjusted the ballast in his new political barge that he was claimed by the two divisions of the Whig party as an adherent; and had the events favored, and nothing transpired to put aside all half-way measures, Governor HUNT might have remained in his go-between craft, enjoying the honors of office; but, unfortunately for him, the violation of the Missouri Compromise has produced a crisis when men are forced to show their flags; and although the Governor has ranged himself under the Silver Gray or K. N. colors, his political opponents will attribute his choice more to his disappointment in the attainment of political preferment than to any patriotic motives which he professes in his letter.

If the Governor expects his political missive will produce any change in the views of his immediate constituents, he will be disappointed, for your correspondent knows something of that constituency; however much they have done to advance the Governor's political interest,—however constantly they have defended him against the assaults of the party to which he once belonged—yet in taking his present position his voice will be impotent. To characterize the union of those men who feel humiliated and aggrieved at the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and who are resolved to stand together on the defensive against the assaults of those who seek to diffuse Slavery over Free territory, as a crusade against the South, comes with an ill grace from one who thought it even very proper and patriotic to fuse with a party on a mere question of financial policy of the General Government. In thus characterizing this movement, the Governor has disclosed a disposition and feeling towards recent political associates, in comparison with the candor and straightness of motive predicated in his letter.

NIAGARA.

Funeral of Abbott Lawrence.

The Boston papers publish full accounts of the funeral of the late ABBOTT LAWRENCE, which took place on Wednesday. Every mark of respect was shown to the deceased; flags on public buildings were displayed at half mast, stores and offices were closed, minute guns were fired, bells were tolled, and the funeral was attended by an immense concourse of people. The Atlas says:

The body of Mr. LAWRENCE, after the post mortem examination, was placed in ice, and remained undisturbed until early yesterday morning, when it was taken from the ice case, preparatory to burial. The coffin was of mahogany, covered with black cloth. The only ornaments were the usual silver studs, and three heavy silver handles on each side. It was perfectly plain. Upon the top was a silver plate bearing the inscription:

ABBOTT LAWRENCE,
BORN SEPTEMBER 16, 1792.
Died August 18, 1855.

The corpse was clad in a dress coat made of white cashmere, the neck being surrounded by a plain white cravat. After being placed in the coffin, the body was taken to the parlor, where it remained for two hours. There the family took the last look of their beloved head. The countenance of the deceased, although somewhat emaciated, looked very natural. There was the same noble expression, the same placid, calm, and yet pleasing features.

Among the notabilities present at the funeral were Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, Hon. R. C. WINTHROP, Judge SPRAGUE, &c. The church in Brattle-square, where the service was read by Dr. LOTHROP, was densely crowded and even the streets around the church were filled with men and women. The procession as it left for Mount Auburn was composed as follows: Following the mourners were forty-three gentlemen in carriages, who have been clerks in Mr. LAWRENCE's employ. Then followed the government of the Mechanic Charitable Association, Mercantile Library Association, and the employés of Mr. CHICKERING, numbering about two hundred, on foot. A large number of citizens followed in carriages. The procession reached Mount Auburn about 4 o'clock. The burial lot of the LAWRENCE family is situated on one of the most beautiful eminences in that lovely city of the dead. In it already repose the bodies of his brothers, AMOS and WILLIAM, and there now reposes all that remains of ABBOTT LAWRENCE.

Death of Ex-Governor Metcalfe.

From the Louisville (Ky.) Courier.

Ex-Governor THOMAS METCALFE died at his seat, Forest Retreat, in Nicholas County, on Saturday evening, Aug. 18. He had suffered for near two weeks from fever, which eventuated in cholera, producing his death.

Governor METCALFE was a native of Farquier County, Va., where he was born on the 20th of March, 1780. When he was quite young his parents emigrated to this State and settled in Fayette, where he had the restricted advantages of a few months' attendance on a country school. At the age of sixteen he was apprenticed to his elder brother, a stone-cutter, but his father dying in three years after, the indentures were cancelled, and he set about making a livelihood for his mother and sisters. These he continued to support as long as necessity required—it being the proudest satisfaction of his life that to the mother who bore him, and the sisters who were the companions of his infancy, he had always been kind, even at times beyond his means.

Fond of study, the young mason made use of all his leisure hours, and soon were developed those strong attributes of intellect, always his characteristics. In 1809 he first appeared as a public speaker, the country then being agitated at a prospect of war with England. But his passion for the tented field had to be restrained until 1812, when he commanded a company at the battle of Fort Meigs, distinguishing himself by his prowess in the presence of an Indian force double the size of his. While absent on this campaign he was reelected to the Legislature, receiving every vote in the county but thirteen. He served in this body for several years, and was first elected to Congress in 1818, defeating Hon. JOSHUA DERSHA, afterwards Governor. He continued a leading member of the National Legislature until 1827, when he was chosen the National Republican candidate for Governor. In this contest, Hon. WM. T. BARRY, a man of great genius and fine address, was his opponent, representing the JACKSON interest. The canvass was one of intense excitement, the entire State being then visited for the first time by rival candidates. At the election, Gov. METCALF came out victorious by a majority of only seven hundred and nine votes. It established, however, the Whig ascendancy in Kentucky, interrupted in only one instance, until the election of Gov. POWELL.

In Congress and the Executive chair Governor METCALFE greatly distinguished himself by his ability and firmness. He was equal to all occasions and shrank from no responsibilities. Hon. GEORGE MCDUFFIE, of South Carolina, having challenged him to fight a duel, he accepted, chose Kentucky rifles and ten paces. The fire-eating Carolinian backed out.

In 1834 Gov. METCALFE was chosen to the State Senate, and in 1840 made President of the Board of Internal Improvement. In 1848 he was appointed to fill Mr. CRITTENDEN's unexpired term in the Senate. Since then he has chiefly confined himself to his farm, beautifully situated, half way between Maysville and Lexington. His old age has been crowned with honors, happy in view of the prosperity of the nation he had so well served. During the last political canvass he frequently addressed public assemblages, with all the vigor and eloquence of his youth. His intellectual strength had not abated one jot or tittle. He was always armed at all points for any controversy. Of a fiery and impetuous nature, he sympathized with the proud spirit of CLAY, and was always a follower of that statesman's fortunes. A stone-mason by trade, he always boasted of his service in that honorable line of the mechanic arts, and delighted in being called the "Old Stone Hammer."

Clairvoyants in Trouble—A Villainous Husband.

Pittsburg Journal, Thursday.

Yesterday morning a man named EDWARDS, the husband of the somewhat noted clairvoyant, Madame EDWARDS, whose stay in this city for some weeks has been very profitable to her in a pecuniary sense, deserted his wife, taking with him everything available, including $125 in money, gold chain, pencil and locket, valued at $60, a daguerreotype in a gold case set with diamonds, and several valuable silk dresses, leaving her absolutely destitute. Madame E. is in the greatest distress.

From her statements we learn that four years ago she eloped with this man EDWARDS, from her parents' home, near Portsmouth, N. H. Her parents are wealthy farmers. Discerning her qualifications for the line of business she is now pursuing, EDWARDS insisted on her devoting her time and attention to it, which she did with great success. Her profits were confided to him, and absorbed generally in providing fine clothing for him. Last week she presented him with a hundred dollar suit.

She says they lived together happily enough. But yesterday morning they had a few words of difficulty, whereupon he took his departure. She thinks he has gone to meet another woman. The boy who conveyed his trunks to the Allegheny depôt was found, and stated that he had been engaged several days ago for that purpose, and to do other things. He also stated that on Monday, EDWARDS visited the ground in which his child was interred, and arranged flowers, &c., around it, an act which speaks a little in his favor. The police telegraphed in every direction—and it is probable EDWARDS will be captured.

P. S.—The Mayor received a dispatch last evening, stating that EDWARDS had been arrested in Cleveland, and was in jail. Madam E. will go on this morning.

Attempt to Burn a Newspaper Office.

The Norfolk Beacon of Aug. 21 says: "Some demon in human form set fire to our office between 8 and 10 o'clock, on Saturday night. This makes the third attempt to burn us out within the last three years. The fire was kindled in the second story, under the steps leading to the third story, where we keep our supply of paper, but was fortunately discovered in time to prevent any serious damage, either to our stock or the building. The engines were promptly on the spot, and we return our most grateful thanks to each and every one of the Fire Companies, and to our friends and acquaintance generally, for the officious alacrity they afforded on the occasion. It is almost impossible to believe that there lives a wretch whose hellish heart should prompt him to an act of incendiarism at such a time as this. The pestilence has caused distress and misery enough for this community, God knows, without any addition to the overwhelming cry from the dust of death. The whole lower portion of the city, damaged as it is by its inhabitants, might have been destroyed by the act, and perhaps would have been, had the villain perpetrator applied his torch at a later hour."

The Fourth of July at Rio de Janeiro.

A correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer, writing from Rio on the 10th of July, gives the following account of the celebration in that city of the recent anniversary of our national independence:

This great day was not permitted to pass unnoticed or unhonored by Rosewell G. Scott, Esq., the American Consul at the above port, in Brazil. On the 2d of the month, notice was given that Mr. Scott would be glad to see every citizen of the United States, then in Rio de Janeiro, at his house in Consorio Velho, No. 20, at 3 o'clock, on the 4th of the month, to unite with him in doing honor to the day. Between one and two o'clock about twenty American citizens assembled at the residence of the Consul, where they were very cordially and gracefully received by Mr. and Mrs. Scott. After warm congratulations upon the return of the great day, finding our country still happy, prosperous and rapidly advancing, the company, about half past two o'clock, introduced into a spacious hall, where a rich collation was ready for them; and two long tables, covered with cold meats, turkeys, tongues, pies of oysters, mutton, wines, pickles, confectionery, and a variety of fruits, and adorned with lovely flowers, were soon filled by the gay and happy company. Mrs. Scott, who is a great favorite in Rio, and admired and respected by her many acquaintances, was accompanied to the table by Mr. SAMPS, a sweet American lady, the wife of Mr. SAMPS, an American merchant here. The parlor and dining-room of the Consul were handsomely adorned with many flags of the United States, and some of Brazil, furnished by Mr. Scott by the captains of American vessels, of whom a number partook of the dinner. Mr. Scott took the chair of one table, aided by Mr. Cooper, an American merchant resident here from Baltimore; while the other table was placed in the care of Captain Rowan G. Scott, Jr., late acting Consul of Rio, assisted by Mr. MANN, the Secretary of Legation at the Court of Brazil. The Rev. Mr. Buckman pronounced a brief and most benediction before the repast commenced. After the company had discussed the many good things before them, the cup of the Consul brought them to order and silence. He addressed them in a manner that seemed to give great satisfaction, and was several times interrupted by the applause and cheers of his hearers; and, at the end of his remarks, he called for private toasts, all of which were received with marked satisfaction by the company, and many of which were followed with bumpers of applause.

Descent of the Police on a Theatre in Operation.

From the Daily Commercial, Aug. 20.

It is well known to the community, that the managers of Tivoli Theatre, on-Vine-street, opposite Freeman's Hall, have been in the habit, each Sabbath evening, of giving what they term "Sunday Concerts," but that the music is always much more secular than sacred in its character. Last evening Madame THIELMAN, wife of the manager, together with a couple of gentlemen, were on the stage, singing an air from the opera of "Fra Diavolo," when suddenly a detachment of the Police entered at the door, headed by Lieut. LAWRENCE, and made their way towards the front. As they neared the stage Madame THIELMAN discovered them and fled. This was the signal for a general scamper. The Bass Drum abandoned the orchestra, and endeavored to escape under the legs of the audience, but being of rather bulky proportions, was seized on derriere and borne in triumph to the Station-House. The Cornet and the two Violins endeavored to fare through the back entrance, but met with a similar fate, while the Trombone, who was a little blind and deaf, continued to blow a blast that would have set HANEMAN on Mammoths in a delirium.

The scene among the audience was laughable in the extreme. The girls screamed prodigiously, or fainted outright—while their beaux vociferated in choice German vernacular, or swore a good round English "G—d D—n." A general rush was made towards the door, and in a few moments the theatre was vacant.

The following is the roster of those who were arrested: Hipolite Boberts, Charles Conrad, Emile Trebbin, Henry Hence, Lawrence Obert, Conrad Kramer, W. Leopold, John D. Heiner, J. H. Stobel, Frederick Reeder, Theodore Halle and Mons. Thielman. They were all released from custody, on Mr. VARWIG, of the City Council, going their bail, and will have a hearing to-day before the Police Court.

Wyandot Indians holding an Election—Their Land Claims.

The Kansas correspondent of the Missouri Republican, writing on the 14th of August, says:

To-day, the Wyandots are holding their election for Chief, and a more interesting and impressive scene I never witnessed. This nation was, a few years ago, the most populous, powerful and warlike of the whole region of the North, and are now dwindled down to the small number of six or seven hundred, all told. Some of them are men of remarkable sense, whose practical observation and sound discretion have induced them to quit many traditional and savage customs, and to form a sort of republican government. They now elect their rulers, and to-day they are to choose their Chief, or President. The polls are held at a lodge about two hundred yards from the confluence of the Kansas and Missouri Rivers, and within full view of passing steamboats. The judges of election are these old braves, who have the confidence of the nation. The voting is done by ballot—and how gravely it proceeds! How unlike the elections of the white man! How much more orderly, dignified and quiet! There is no excitement, no noise—no electioneering or loud words. They steal silently from the forest; they congregate in small squads beneath the boughs of spreading elms; they confer together gravely, and then, as stately relics of a mighty race, they step with a sense of conscious sovereignty to the ballot-box, and vote for the Chieftain of their choice. What an example to their white brethren.

In a treaty with this Nation in 1852, the Government of the United States granted to them a small portion of that beautiful and fertile country that lies between and in an acute angle of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers, and thirty-two floating positions which can be located on any of the public lands west of the Mississippi River. These floating positions they are now offering for sale, and some of them have been purchased this morning at the marketably low sum of eight hundred dollars! A section, you know, is 640 acres; so that, at the rate of $800 per section, they will receive only $25,600 for 20,480 acres of the choicest lands in the world. They can be located in Kansas, Nebraska, or anywhere, without waiting for surveys, and the title becomes complete at the moment of location.

New Proposed Railroad.

From the St. Lawrence Republican, Aug. 21.

Many of our readers are doubtless aware that a project is in contemplation by a responsible number of our leading capitalists, to construct a railroad from Ogdensburg to a point near the Forest House, in the town of Canton, where a connection is to be perfected with the Watertown and Potsdam Railroad, and through the Watertown and Rome Road with the New-York Central

SCIENCE

SIXTH DAY.

Brown University,
Providence, Tuesday, Aug. 21, 1855.

Constitutional questions exercise the mind of the Association. With many more, there will be long work. Mr. great Expounder appears; and the body is amused to and fro by divers winds of doctrine.

A large part of the session has been occupied today with elaborate discussions of a new draft of the Constitution, proposed by amendments to that which was proposed at the Washington meeting. Great differences of opinion existed, and members were more in general than they have yet done.

Early in the session, the existing Constitution and the Amendments as proposed to be amended, were printed in parallel sections, and freely distributed among the members. On the 16th and 18th inst., (Saturday and Monday last,) the Committee on the Constitution took these amendments, overhauled them, re-amended, and reported a new draft, which, wet from the press, was this morning placed in the hands of members. It was as if a shell had suddenly dropped among combatants, with the fuse burning. Tammany Hall would not have been ashamed of the uproar. Eleven men were on the floor at once, each trying to cry loudest "Mr. President!" Two hours passed away. I shall not attempt to follow all the exclamation that was indulged, nor to record the apologies which followed when the parties who were hit threw back sharp swords for balls. It was an exciting session.

Professors AGASSIZ, MITCHEL, BACHE, HENRY, PEIRCE, CASWELL, Capt. WILKES, and any number besides, had a word to say. Mr. PEIRCE finally declared the whole discussion to be foolish and unprofitable, and he cut sharply right and left. Professor BACHE, as Chairman of the Constitutional Committee, stood on the platform to await the result. Dr. B. A. GOULD, Secretary of the Committee, replied warily to something that Prof. W. B. TAYLOR had said.

Many of the members appeared to lean towards an abolition of all Constitutions. They would rule an Annual Convention equally well as an organized Association; particularly if that Association is to undertake the task of forming its code of rules permanently.

By way of compromise, a motion of Prof. CASWELL was carried, postponing the consideration of the whole subject for one year, until the meeting in Albany. A twelve-month will give time for reflection. Members can procure copies of the proposed Constitution from Prof. LOVERING, if they like.

WHAT THE HUBBUB IS.

It appears to be conceded that the root of all the trouble is to a jealousy of the power of the Standing Committee.

That body, controlling the action of the Association, has been subject to unkind remarks from the floor, proceeding from discontented members. The Washington Constitution proposed to increase its number to twenty-six; the Providence draft reduces it to eighteen, and also provides for the creation of the office of Vice-President, while arbitrary power is placed in the hands of the Committee. It also assigns papers, arrange the business, suggest place and time of meeting, examine or exclude papers; appoint the local Committee; nominate persons for membership; decide upon publications, &c., &c. Power like this, it is contended, should not be wielded by a limited number. The new Constitution leaves the management mainly in the hands of the Standing Committee.

MR. BRAINERD'S CASE.

Mr. JOHN BRAINERD's case came up again. A Committee, consisting of PRINCE and DANA, reported that the conclusions of the paper on "Pebbles," that Mr. B. presented at Cleveland, were utterly absurd, and recommended that the Association refuse to print. So voted.

Afterwards Mr. BRAINERD got up to make a personal explanation. He considered that the Association was doing a bad thing by discouraging investigators whose results may differ from those of others.

Nobody replied.

LOCAL COMMITTEE FOR ALBANY.

The following gentlemen were to-day appointed the local Committee for the meeting in Albany: Dr. F. B. Hoyt, Thomas W. Olcott, Hon. P. Rensselaer, Stephen Crossby, Hon. D. D. Barnard, J. W. L. Pruyn, Gideon Hawley, Hon. A. J. Parker, Dr. Thomas Hun.

INVITATIONS TO DISTINGUISHED FOREIGNERS.

On motion of Prof. O. M. MITCHEL, it was resolved that invitations to attend the future meetings of the Association be extended to learned bodies, and distinguished individuals in foreign lands.

Prof. MITCHEL held out a hope that the Astronomer Royal of England, Mr. AIRY, would be present at the Albany meeting.

Prof. AGASSIZ was warmly in favor of the proposition to invite others from abroad. A similar interchange of courtesies prevails among the scientific associations of Germany, France and Italy.

A SCIENTIFIC INDEX.

On motion of Prof. PEIRCE, the Association endorsed the plan of a Scientific Index of papers in Mathematics, &c., presented a day or two ago by Lieut. HUNT, and a resolution was adopted declaring the importance of such enterprises in advancing the interests of science.

Prof. AGASSIZ hoped to see this plan extended to other branches of science. His own labors in this direction have resulted in the issue of four octavo volumes of five hundred pages each, relating solely to papers in Natural History. These were published abroad, and there are probably not more than four or five copies in the United States.

REPORT ON THE ECLIPSE.

Prof. BACHE, as Chairman of the Committee to observe the eclipse of May, 1854, reported briefly that the view of many of the observers was obscured by clouds, but that the results of the observations that were made, have appeared in the American Journal. The Committee asked to be discharged.

DISCHARGE OF COMMITTEES.

Like faithful servants, the following Committees have finished their labors; to-day they were all discharged:

1. To memorialize Congress in relation to a Geographical Department of the Congress Library.

2. To memorialize Congress for an appropriation to enable Prof. MITCHEL to perfect and apply his new Astronomical Apparatus.

3. On the Solar Eclipse of May 26, 1854.

CLEVELAND PROCEEDINGS TO BE REPUBLISHED.

The Standing Committee report that arrangements have been made to republish the volume of Cleveland Proceedings, which was so horribly mangled.

PISCICULTURE.

Fish-breeding has been lately talked of.

On motion of Prof. AGASSIZ, a Committee was appointed to-day to memorialize the Legislature of New-York in reference to the subject. The Committee consists of Prof. AGASSIZ and Mr. DANA of New-Haven.

CALIFORNIA QUICKSILVER.

A description of the geology and mineral associations of the Quicksilver mine of New-Almaden, California, was given by Mr. BLAKE. The ore is a massive sulphuret or cinnabar, identical in composition with vermilion. It is found in a series of beds interspersed with rock; some of the latter are highly charged with the ore. It also occurs in left irregular veins. Thickness, sometimes eight feet. The rocks are similar to those of San Francisco, and like them have the peculiar flinty metamorphic character.

[illegible]

Prof. HENRY made a verbal report on behalf of the Committee appointed to investigate the storm theory of Mr. BASSNETT. The Committee invited Mr. BASSNETT, who has a new plan to hold forth, to predict the weather,—for a space of two months, I think it was. He did so. The Committee received his predictions, and watched them and the weather. They worked well enough for ten days; the weather staying just as Mr. B. said it would;—but on the eleventh there came a change, and Mr. BASSNETT was confounded by the perversity of the elements. Prof. HENRY thereupon announces that Mr. BASSNETT's theory in utterly false. Mr. BASSNETT is supposed to be settled.

Mr. J. D. WHITNEY had a long description to-day of the rocks of the Lake Superior region. The facts have appeared in print in the report made to Congress by FOSTER & WHITNEY. FOSTER, I hear, has given up geology and gone into politics and Know-Nothingism in Massachusetts, and is likely to go to Congress. Better than cracking rocks; paying better certainly. Mr. FOSTER was conspicuous at former meetings of the Association.

A complete copy of the Proceedings of the body was voted to the Providence Athenæum, and another to the University.

Dr. TORREY, the President, left the Chair, called Prof. BACHE to occupy it, and proceeded to describe two remarkable plants of California and Sonora. Mr. N. P. GRAY, Naturalist of the Expedition to Sonora, had sent him a long letter, descriptive, which was read. One plant (the Sonora) was found growing below the surface of the ground, had a root two feet long, and was much sought after by the Indians. It is something like a mushroom, has the taste of the sweet potato, only more delicate, and is cooked by roasting on hot coals. The California plant has a root of sizeable dimensions, as large as a barrel, Dr. TORREY says.

BIT TREES IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. BLAKE has given an account of a grove of Mammoth Trees in Calaveras County, which as we are talking of California, may be worth saying a word about. He says the grove is near the sources of the Colorado River, in a sheltered valley, 5,000 feet above the sea-level. The valley is densely wooded with evergreen trees. One hundred and ninety trees of great size have been counted within a space a quarter of a mile square. They stand generally in groups of two or three together. Sizes range from diameters of fifteen to thirty feet; and heights of two hundred and fifty to three hundred and sixty. One was measured by Mr. BLAKE, which is still standing. It measures 94 feet in circumference at the roots, giving a diameter of 31 feet.

COMMITTEES.

Sundry individual Committees, appointed to investigate given subjects, were continued for another year. The Committees appointed at Cleveland were Profs. BACHE, on Tides; HENRY, on Atmospheric Electricity; HALL, on Paleozoic Rocks; J. LAWRENCE SMITH, on Micro-Chemistry; GIBBS, on Organic Chemistry; LEIDY, on Fossil Reptiles; PEIRCE, on Planetary Perturbations; Dr. BURNETT, on Recent Advances in Anatomy and Physiology; AGASSIZ, on Alternations of Generation; DANA, on Geographical Distributions; HALDEMAN, on Ethnology; GOULD, on Electro-Chronographic Observations.

Dr. BURNETT has died since the Washington meeting. He was still a very young man, but in his investigations of anatomy had given much promise. He was an active member of the Association.

Dr. GIBBS and Prof. PEIRCE reported at this meeting; so did Prof. HENRY in part. The rest furnished no formal reports, and were continued.

THE WIND-UP—A COMPLIMENTARY DINNER.

The customary closing sentiments formed a feature of the Complimentary Dinner, which was to-day tendered to the Association by the citizens, and (as Prof. BACHE insists,) by the citizenesses of Providence.

The dinner was presided over by Prof. ALEXIS CASWELL, of Brown University. A hundred and fifty gentlemen, accompanied by their ladies, sat down. Dr. WAYLAND was called out for a speech and gave one. He spoke to a sentiment to the "Progress of the Race."

Prof. PEIRCE, of Harvard, was solid, and facetious mathematically.

Prof. O. M. MITCHEL was funny astronomically.

Prof. HENRY was inclined to philosophize naturally.

Prof. HALL, of Albany, (President elect,) was geologically ornate.

In short, gentlemen carried out the idea of their specialties, and the occasion was pleasant.

We sat at table from 2, when the collation was served up under the University Tent upon the Green, till the shades of the afternoon fell with drops of rain, and then we scampered away.

So ends this meeting, and a very respectable one it has been, in point both of numbers and character. The citizens have opened their houses freely for evening entertainments. Soirees have been been given by Mayor SMITH, Mr. BROWN (son of the founder of the University), Gen. DYER, ZACHARIAH ALLEN, Esq., and Dr. TORREY. The elegance of these receptions could not have been excelled. By means of them the Association has had a pleasant taste of the social enjoyments of Providence.

MR. BIGELOW'S CASE.

Mr. A. BIGELOW has favored me with an especial notice in the columns of the TIMES. Give me space to reiterate exactly what I stated in the first place. Mr. BIGELOW had a paper on the "Drift," to read in the Geological Section; he was put on the programme; got up to read when his turn came; was called on to stop by Mr. LESLEY; did stop; was informed that his facts were purely elementary, and were such as everybody knew who pretended to be a geologist; and, though he may have been, and probably was, treated in an unnecessarily summary manner by Mr. LES-

[illegible]

A private vote of thanks, on behalf of the TIMES, said I have done. The editors of the Providence Journal have laid me under special obligations for the use of their premises after the hours for closing. The Librarian of Brown University, Mr. R. A. GUILD, has done "his possible" to be amiable, and has made me so. I am obliged.

N.

The following are the remarks of SAMUEL B. RUGGLES, Esq., of this City, on the death of Mr. LAWRENCE, delivered at the meeting of the Association on Monday:

Mr. SAMUEL B. RUGGLES rose to second the resolutions. He concurred most cordially in the judicious and eloquent tribute paid by Prof. BACHE to the private virtues and public services of Mr. LAWRENCE, and would only advert, in addition, to the position he had occupied in respect to American science, as rendering the proposed expression of feeling by this Association peculiarly appropriate.

Mr. LAWRENCE was probably the most important of the many important links which bind this Association to the community around it. In truth, he was the very type of that great and generous portion of the American public, ready and willing, at all times, to lend their hands, and heads, and hearts, and purse to the support of science. Nay, more. Mr. LAWRENCE stood forth a living exponent of the wide-spread opinion now pervading the American mind, that collegiate education is radically defective. He saw and felt, what so many others are beginning to see and feel, that man was made to study Nature; that physical science has become a positive necessity in any enlightened scheme of instruction; that the hitherto undisputed sway of mere language, of quiddities and verbal subtleties, has passed away. In a word, in ABBOTT LAWRENCE the fundamental idea was made incarnate, that man, to be man, must study not only words, but things.

Mr. R. said that, for one, he held the charge that the community in general was indifferent to the necessity of the highest culture, to be wholly unfounded. On the contrary, the public desired and demanded a more comprehensive education, one more suited to their best and highest interests and necessities, not a narrow teaching drawn from the mouldering cloisters of dark and bygone ages, but a full, fresh, living volume of instruction, both in science and in letters, enlarged, modernized, and adapted to the century and to the civilization in which we are actually existing.

Mr. R. said it had been his good fortune frequently to hear from Mr. LAWRENCE full and animated expositions of his views on this all-important point,—and it was but due to his memory now to bear testimony to the strong, manly sense, the practical sagacity, the noble, ample patriotism, which he carried into the whole subject. His broad and enlightened vision had enabled him to discern in this young empire of ours, a new people, placed by the Providence of God on a new and all-but untrodden continent, here to build up a new world, by the fullest development and best exertion of all their physical, intellectual and moral powers. Taking such a view, how could Mr. LAWRENCE think any education sufficient or suitable which should be devoted all but exclusively to languages and metaphysics, and failed to include a thorough study of the vast material Universe, with all its varied and majestic consords, its mighty and beneficent powers and agencies? Convinced of the wretched short-comings in this respect of most of our existing Colleges, Mr. LAWRENCE founded and endowed on a scale of requisite amplitude, the Scientific School at Cambridge, bearing his honored name,—and there it will stand, for coming ages, and as long as the educational history of our country shall endure, the precursor and model of kindred establishments, to be scattered broadcast throughout our favored land. It is not for this Association to add to the large and honest renown of their lamented patron, associate and friend. He has himself sown the seed of his own ample and glorious harvest,—for where in all the broad expanse of our continental Union, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is there a community or hamlet so small or remote, as not to know and pronounce the name of ABBOTT LAWRENCE, as the most sagacious, patriotic and munificent patron of American science?

PROVIDENCE.

Brown University—The Commencement—Dr. Wayland's Resignation—Things in Providence.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Thursday, Aug. 23, 1855.

The city of Providence, great in memories of ROGER WILLIAMS, important to the little State of Rhode Island as one-half of its capital, and very steep as regards its hills, is a good place to come to and a better one to stay in. We who have been here a week in attendance upon the meeting of that learned scientific body which has so many terrible names for a simple subject, are considerably astonished to find that it is so much of a place, and agreeably entertained by rambles among the factories.

The great event of the day is the approaching withdrawal of Rev. Dr. WAYLAND from the Presidency of the University—an office which he has filled for twenty-nine years, and in which he will be succeeded at the commencement of the next term by Rev. Dr. SEARS, of Boston.

Dr. WAYLAND's resignation was tendered to the Executive Board of the Corporation on the 31st of July. He was appointed President of the University in the year 1826, soon after the resignation of Dr. MESSER. He entered upon the performance of his duties in January, 1827. Four Presidents have been installed over the College since its foundation, eighty-seven years ago. Dr. JAMES MANNING was appointed first President in 1765, and was succeeded by Rev. JONATHAN MAXCY in 1792; Rev. ASA MESSER in 1802, and Rev. FRANCIS WAYLAND in 1827. Dr. WAYLAND's age is about fifty-five, and that of his successor about the same. A man of commanding presence, polished in manners and in speech, hospitable, kind-hearted and progressive, Dr. WAYLAND has made as many warm personal friends as he has literary admirers. It is understood that he retires from active life in order to devote himself to the writing of books. The preparation for the Press of the matter which he has accumulated, will be no inconsiderable labor.

The ex-President, as we must now call him, married a fortune, and has amassed a large property. He has, according to the ordinary laws of life, a hale and hearty old age of retirement before him. He is erecting a handsome house—his present residence being the property of the University, and destined only for the occupancy of the President.

Brown University is old. It ought to grow gray—have mosses and lichens clambering up its sides—be possessed by spiders spinning webs in dark corners—have a general air of antiquity about it. But it does none of these things. Its buildings, save where the stucco has fallen from Manning Hall, are in excellent repair. Its grounds are beautiful. It has plenty of fresh, sweet air, blowing off green fields and smelling of hay and flowering plants. There is no dust. Nothing but sward and clean gravel. Its corner-stone was laid by Mr. JOHN BROWN, May 14, 1771. Mr. BROWN gave his name to the University, and very much money. His son, now living here in princely wealth, entertained the members of the American Association last week. Mr. JOHN C. BROWN is a bachelor, and a bibliopole, with a library filled with the rarest works, obtained sometimes at prices which in this country are fabulous—as for instance $2,500 for a choice old volume.

The University Library is in Manning Hall, presided over by Mr. GUILD, who sits among 28,000 volumes and 10,000 pamphlets. In English

Board of Councilmen Committee on Charges.

The Special Committee appointed to investigate certain charges against Mr. Street Commissioner FOREY, assembled yesterday afternoon in the Library of the City Hall.

After some delay, Mr. Councilman PINCKNEY arrived, and the following gentlemen composed the Committee: Messrs. WEBBER, JACKSON and PINCKNEY.

S. D. Moulton, sworn and examined by the Chairman: Has not, of his own knowledge, any knowledge of Mr. FOREY's receiving moneys for giving contracts to certain parties; has heard by common report of such matters; knows Mr. PHILIP FOREY; has heard him say he had to pay $500 to get the plan of the parapet wall in Fifty-first street, East River; Mr. FOREY had a contract to regulate and grade Fifty-first-street, from Third avenue to East River.

Witness stated this of his own knowledge. In this specification, as FOREY informed him, was a clause requiring him to build a wall according to a certain plan furnished by the Street Commissioner. Mr. FOREY commenced, and progressed with the work until it was time he should have the plan of the wall, so as to get out the stone for the purpose of building it. The plan was kept back for some purpose or other, so that he was unable to complete the street last Fall. He informed witness that his prices per foot for building the wall had been put in, but he could not get the plan.

This plan he finally obtained, "at a pretty dear rate." These were the words he used to witness. Mr. FOREY completed the street, got his assessments in, and received his money.

Mr. JACKSON wished to know if hearsay testimony was valid. As one of the Committee he objected to it. Mr. FUREY was not here, nor represented by counsel.

Mr. WEBBER said the witness kept Mr. FOREY's accounts and knew all his affairs. He was in his confidence. The Chairman, Mr. PINCKNEY, was in favor of receiving this testimony only for what it was worth.

Mr. JACKSON would move that all be struck out, except what the witness knew of his own knowledge.

The CHAIRMAN was inclined to attach little importance to anything except direct testimony. Mr. WEBBER said, the rules of a strictly judicial tribunal were scarcely applicable here, and asked the witness whether he had any knowledge of any such charge as evident in the books of his employer, Mr. FOREY. To which the witness replied, that there had been some political differences between them; that he had mentioned the matter to Alderman HERRICK. He had no doubt but that all Fohey had told him was true to the letter.

Mr. PINCKNEY said it was desirable to obtain the direct evidence of Mr FOREY. He was now farming in Michigan. The witness observed that all he knew on the subject was derived from information afforded him by Mr. FOREY; has no knowledge of Mr. FUREY's receiving any other money on account of any other contract; knows the condition of Fourth-avenue, between Thirty-eighth and Fiftieth-streets, to be in the same condition now as for the past twenty years; noticed that ordinances had been passed to grade the avenue; has no knowledge why this matter has been delayed.

Being asked if he knew ought more "of his own knowledge," the witness answered he did not.

Alderman Aaron Herrick, sworn and examined: Knows Mr. PHILLIP FOREY; knows nothing about his contract to grade the Third-avenue; understood he had one; never saw it; recollects Mr. FOREY's assessment list coming into his hands; [illegible] as confirmed by the Board of Aldermen, and came from the Board of Councilmen; had a conversation with Mr. FOREY as to the confirmation of that contract.

Being asked, "Have you any knowledge of Mr. FOREY receiving $1,500 in lieu of the $500 given to Mr. FUREY?" witness said he had no such knowledge; told Mr. FOREY if he had given any money, to get it back; gave this advice voluntarily.

The Chairman said his object in subpœning Aldermen HERRICK and Mr. MOULTON, was that the truth might be got at.

The Committee being provided with no other witnesses, adjourned to next Tuesday, at 4 o'clock.

Drowned.

Charge of Corruption against Aldermen Moore.

The Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen appointed to investigate the charge of corruption against Alderman MOORE, as preferred by Alderman HOFFMIRE, met yesterday at 3 P. M. Present—Aldermen ELY (Chairman) and HERRICK.

Aldermen MOORE and HOFFMIRE were both in attendance.

Alderman ELY, Chairman of the Committee, asked Alderman HOFFMIRE if his witnesses were present, and if so, who he desired to be called first.

Alderman HOFFMIRE was about to name a witness when Alderman HERRICK interrupted him, and expressed his wish before the investigation was opened, to know the charges brought against Alderman MOORE specifically mentioned. It was well in the first place, he considered, to know as to what they were going to investigate.

Alderman ELY said it was known the charge was one of official corruption. This, though properly a general form, he considered was specific in its significance, touching the character and integrity of Alderman MOORE as a member of the Board of Aldermen. He called the Clerk to read the resolution designating the charge, and the truthfulness or correctness of which, they were empowered to examine into. The resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That a Special Committee of three be appointed to investigate the charges of corruption made by the Aldermen of the Fifth Ward against the Alderman of the Third Ward, and that said Committee be instructed to report the facts and the testimony, with the right to call before them witnesses and papers.

This resolution, Alderman ELY contended, specified plainly enough the charge. How the charge was sustained could only be shown by the testimony that might be adduced.

Alderman MOORE asked the Chairman if he ever knew or heard of a case in a court of law, where a party was tried upon any charge without distinct specifications under that charge being first enunciated.

Alderman ELY said he did not pretend to be posted thoroughly upon the requisitions of regularly constituted courts, nor did he consider it pertinent to the present case. He desired, in the matter before them, the doors should be thrown wide open—the wider he thought the better. He desired Alderman MOORE might come out clean washed from any and every imputation of corruption.

Alderman HOFFMIRE stated that he never had made any particular charge touching any particular act of Alderman MOORE.

Alderman MOORE—Yes, Sir, you did, and reiterated it when called upon in the Aldermen's Chamber for explanation.

Alderman HOFFMIRE—I retracted what I previously said as far as my knowledge was concerned, and said I would bring parties who could testify to Alderman MOORE having received money as a bribe.

Alderman MOORE—You charged me with taking money from the Merchants' Line.

The CHAIRMAN—Never in open Board.

Alderman MOORE—It was elsewhere.

Alderman HOFFMIRE—It was nowhere. I never brought such a charge.

Alderman MOORE—Alderman BAIRD can tell a different story.

Between the Chairman and Alderman HERRICK a prolonged discussion ensued in ineffectual attempts to agree as to the basis of conducting the examination. The Chairman adhered to his proposition to have the field of investigation wide and expansive. It was, he urged, a simple case of reference, and should be proceeded with as was the universal practice in reference cases. Alderman HERRICK strenuously insisted the charges should be specifically named before he should consent to any witnesses being sworn. As the Chairman proposed, all the scandal that was, or ever had been afloat about the Board of Aldermen might be inquired into. He asked that the charge be written out—the one of corruption was general and vague. Meanwhile, Aldermen HOFFMIRE and MOORE indulged in occasional remark and rejoinder of not over courteous or mild character. Agreement between the two members of the Committee being declared impossible, it was at length decided to adjourn without further action, until a call of the Chairman. And so—after four attempts at a meeting—adjourned the first session of the Committee in this case.

Attempted Suicide.

An attempt to commit suicide was made by a man, whose name, from papers found in his possession, is supposed to be M. D. DINICK. At about 12½ o'clock, as Policeman THOMPSON of the First District, was patrolling his beat, he heard the report of a pistol discharged twice in immediate succession. Looking in the direction of the explosion, he saw at about ten paces distance a man fall to the ground. On going to the spot, the marks of the gun-wads were found upon his thigh. The man, on being questioned, attributed his rash act to "trouble." On his person was found in money, $20 60, a bullet mould, two keys, a bottle containing gun-powder, two knives and a snuff-box. He was conveyed to the Police Station.

Editorial Sensibilities.

The Banner of the Cross thus speaks of the Churchman:—"We cannot consent to handy words with such a scurrilous sheet as this has become; and sincerely commiserating the marked change in its tone and character since it came into the hands of its present conductors, it will take much to provoke us ever to notice it again." To which the Churchman responds—"Of course, we do not look for the approval of clergymen who can devote that time and attention to editing newspapers which they have solemnly engaged to give diligently and wholly to their priestly and pastoral duties."

Rescued from Drowning.

At about 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, a boy five years of age fell off the dock at the foot of Thirty-fifth-street, into the East River, where he would have been drowned had not Officer KNIFFIN, the dockmaster of the Twenty-first District, jumped into the water and rescued him as he was sinking for the last time. The child was given to its mother, by whom life was retained. This is the third party that this same officer has snatched from a sudden death since he was on the post.

Camphene Explosion.

The alarm of fire in the Sixth District on Wednesday evening last, was occasioned by the burning of a camphene lamp in the barber's shop No. 84 Pike-street.

Ran Over.

At about midnight on Wednesday, a man named HENRY THOMAS was run over by a carriage as he was crossing to the Fulton ferry. Being badly hurt, he was conveyed to the City Hospital.

The Steamboat New World.

The New World, which was being rebuilt and enlarged at the foot of Twelfth-street, East River, will take her place as a night boat between New-York and Albany next Tuesday. She is a splendid vessel, and contains several accommodations not yet used by any other boat. The extreme length, over all, is 278 feet and greatest width, outside the guards, 80 feet. She has two tiers of state rooms, fore and aft the cotonnades, with open domes for the purpose of light and ventilation. All the state rooms aft are furnished with water supplied from the tanks on board, which is a great improvement on the old system. There are 232 state rooms, together with 60 open berths, situated amidships on each side the main deck aft the ladies saloon; 34 saloons for the accommodation of families, and one bridal chamber. The gallery which surrounds the main deck was designed by Mr. NEWTON, and displays some elaborate and classic ornamentation. The paddle boxes contain a representation of the globe, with a map of both hemispheres, supported on either side by spread eagles carved from the wood.

The New World is certainly the most superb of our river boats, nothing being wanting in elegance of construction or extent of accommodation.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board met on Wednesday afternoon, His Honor the Mayor in the Chair.

A report from the Committee on County Offices auditing several bills from the Comptroller was received and read, the names and amounts being as follows:

RAYMOND, HARPER & CO.

Another Mexican War Looming in the Future.

There is good reason to believe that an organized invasion of Mexico is now on foot within the limits of the United States. Indeed it is publicly proclaimed that one Capt. W. R. Henry is at the head of a large company of armed volunteers in Texas, raised for the express purpose of marching into Mexico and waging war upon the Government of that country. His proclamation to the people of Texas, inviting them to join in the expedition, has been published, and another document which he intends to disseminate among the Mexicans, has also been issued. Letters from the Mexican frontier state that he was expected there early in the present month. And all this is done against a Government with which we maintain friendly relations,—in direct violation of our own laws, and yet, so far as appears, without any active interference on the part of our authorities. What does this mean? Does President Pierce intend to plunge us into another Mexican war? Has he resolved to play this as his last stake in the desperate game for a renomination?

It is idle to say that the Government cannot stop these lawless movements. It can,—and it does,—whenever it wishes to do so. It stopped the invasion of Cuba. It has broken up two or three expeditions which were fitted out against that Island. It broke up the Kinney expedition, and that, too, upon some suspicion of an unlawful intent. And it has eagerly interfered and successfully defeated the attempt to enlist soldiers in this country to fight against Russia in the ranks of the Allied Powers. In all these cases it has insisted upon a rigid enforcement of our Neutrality laws,—and it has secured it. Why are these laws to be ignored in the case of Mexico?

We published some days since the proclamations of these invaders; they appeal for aid on the ground that they are seeking to establish a Government in Mexico favorable to the interests of Texas—that they propose to extend the institutions of the United States over the whole Continent. Is it possible that the Administration is determined deliberately to make itself a party to these lawless schemes by preterm[illegible] law in regard to them? Is it resolved upon another filibuster crusade,—and is this the shape it stands to give it at the outset? The President unquestionably has it in his power to plunge the country into another war, if he sees fit to exercise it. President Polk did it once, by as bold and lawless an act of usurpation as has ever been committed in this country, and it is far from impossible that President Pierce may not be unwilling to follow his example. It is certainly singular that we hear of no attempt to suppress an invasion of Mexico from our soil, so openly organized, so boldly proclaimed and so directly contrary to the spirit and letter of our laws. It is not easy to reconcile this silent apathy with any theory of fidelity to justice and right on the part of the Administration.

Kossuth and President Pierce.

In addition to his usual correspondence for the Times, we publish this morning a Memorial addressed by Governor Kossuth a year ago to President Pierce, upon topics of general concern and of special interest to him, as to every one who has any just appreciation of the duties of a free Republic to any people making an effort to be free. In this letter Gov. Kossuth states some very interesting and important facts concerning his intercourse while in this country with Mr. Webster, showing the profound interest with which that great American statesman regarded the struggle for liberty among the nations of Europe, and his readiness to provide, even in advance, for every contingency which might offer us a fair opportunity to speak a word or perform some act of encouragement to any people contending for their rights. He secured Gov. Kossuth that prompt attention would be given by our Government to any representations he might make upon this subject, and especially to any intimation that, in the war which even then he foresaw was close at hand, our recognition of the independence of any nation that should fairly achieve it, could be of service.

Acting upon this assurance, Gov. Kossuth, in August of last year, addressed to the President, with the knowledge and approval, and by the aid of Mr. Buchanan, the memorial which we publish this morning. He rehearses in it the assurances of Mr. Webster, which encouraged him to write, gives a clear statement of the condition of affairs in Europe, suggests the probability that the people of Hungary would ere long renew their struggle for independence, and desires to know what course our Government would adopt in certain specified contingencies. The letter was eminently proper and respectful, and from its bearing on public matters of the utmost importance, merited the prompt attention of the Government.

Yet to this day, neither the President nor the Secretary of State has vouchsafed any reply,—not even an acknowledgment of its receipt! Mr. Marcy's American fervor and zeal for liberty, had evaporated with his Koszta letter; and President Pierce's statesmanship seems never to have extended beyond the appointment of Postmasters and special[illegible] in votes. So far as our foreign relations are concerned, the Administration is a cipher,—except where, as in Mexico, it is a great deal worse. Not the faintest glimmering of a principle in the conduct of foreign affairs,—not even to have pretended the contrary by the Washington Cabinet. Stolid indifference,—a stupid insensibility to everything like Free Principles and Popular Rights, abroad as well as at home, has settled upon the Administration like a dense, impenetrable fog. We thought Mr. Fillmore's Administration quite too inactive and inattentive to the development of Freedom in Europe; but so long as Mr. Webster was an active member of it, it did not lack either the sense to recognize, or the patriotism to encourage, every great movement for freedom and independence which our example has induced the people of Europe to make.

The War in Europe—Interesting Developments.

Private correspondence by the Pacific puts us in possession of intelligence, at once curious and important, concerning political movements in Europe. The following paragraphs from these letters come from a quarter connected with the French Court, and likely to be well informed, not only as to what has been actually done, but as to movements in contemplation, in the highest circles. We give them, therefore, as entitled to attention and confidence:

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 10, 1855.

"The English Government exhibits that sense of defeat which is known in pugilism as 'hitting wild.' We are at a loss what to do for Generals, the old ones will not satisfy the public, and we have no young ones. Ministers have determined to pick the youngest on the army list and 'Go it blind' as you say in America. This chance has fallen upon General Markham, a name hitherto utterly unknown to military fame. Some eighteen years ago when the troubles in Canada called out the troops, there was a Major Markham of the 32d Regiment, a sharp little man enough. He was made Lieutenant-Colonel of the same regiment, which came home in 1840, and was drafted out to India for the late Sikh war. Colonel Markham and his regiments were at the taking of Ghuznee. But how, when, or for what he was made a General I cannot obtain information. He acted as Military Secretary to Sir Harry Smith, or to Lord Harding, I forgot which. He has, however, no antecedents whatever; but as experienced Generals have failed in taking Sebastopol, our only hopes are on finding somebody that has no reputation; perhaps he will do something. General Markham has another recommendation just now; he is a plebeian; he has no aristocratic connections; he is, therefore, a sop to the Cerberus of Administrative Reform. The Senior United Service sneer at such a youngster as a Commander-in-Chief; but Markham commences his career at the age of 43. This was the age of Wellington when he won Waterloo and closed his career. This will show you that our aristocracy is in its dotage.

"There is a consistent rumor of an extraordinary fusion on the question of Administrative Reform. A collusion rather than a coalition, between D'Israeli, Gladstone, Layard, Molesworth and Lord Stratford de Redcliffe is afoot. Bulwer is to be sent to Vienna as Grand Chargé with Plenipo rank. Such is the rumor which adds the renomination of Chas. Napier to command—but in the Black Sea this time. It is further stated that Palmerston indirectly offered this command to the Admiral, but he refused all commands and honors while a stigma was unremoved from his name.

"Everything has turned upon the success of the great French Loan. This immense fiat of the nation has shaken Austria, and is the real reason of her new adherence to the Western Powers. Louis Napoleon slipped the throng and let loose the hounds of rebellion in Spain; Spain immediately succumbed and gives any army to the Crimea. Louis Napoleon simultaneously announced to Austria that, as she had reduced her forces in the Danubian Provinces, a French army would occupy those places. Austria cedes to the threat, but Napoleon has no intention of trusting to her word. A French army will land at the mouth of the Danube, and a powerful demonstration will be made against the Russian frontier. Napoleon will lead this force in person; it will consist of 110,000 French, with Canrobert, Prince Napoleon and Lord Cardigan as generals of division. An English force of 25,000, under Sir Harry Smith, will be added, Lord Cardigan being General of the Allied Cavalry. Louis Napoleon Commander-in-Chief of the whole. The Emperor is playing the game of Europe with consummate skill. All parties and all powers are exhibiting their weakness and their unpopularity. He alone rises as they descend in the European scale.

"This is the real foundation for the rumor that France is on the eve of war with Austria. I wrote to you before how Austria was checked and how she could not stir.

"The 'backstairs' in the Tuileries do not believe in the grossesse of the Empress.

"I give you these details as good hearsay. You know the quarter from which they come and how much reliance may be placed upon it. Napoleon has never given up the idea of conducting the Russian war in person. It was the personal influence of the Queen of England that withheld him from the Crimea last Spring, and it is hinted that the interesting state of the Empress is actually pronounced to deter him from this Danubian Campaign. But as the Emperor said to Lord Palmerston when the Minister was condoling with him on his want of an heir: "Ah, my Lord, my children must be my military successes." Napoleon will no more trust to the promises of Eugenie than to the promises of Austria."

The following additional paragraph is from the same quarter, but is given as a Court Rumor merely;—it must be taken, therefore, subject to whatever doubt that fact may throw upon its accuracy:

"On the departure of Napoleon for the East, an Anglo-French army will be concentrated on the Rhine. To this force will be added the Spanish contingent, the whole under the command of H. R. H. the Duke of Cambridge, while the cavalry, commanded by the Duke of Lucca. This force professedly stationed as a threat to the German Kingdoms, will in reality watch over the French Empire during the absence of Napoleon.

"The Queen's offer to the Duke of Cambridge, of the Command-in-Chief in the Crimea, was made to be refused by him to raise his popularity, and to become the stepping stone to the above."

The American Association.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science, founded upon the model of the British Association of the same name, has just closed its seventh year at a meeting in the City of Providence. We have given considerable space to a record of its proceedings, because it is an organization which possesses a national character, and, if not altogether popular in its nature, has opportunities for conferring essential benefit upon the community. Among its members are men whose names stand deservedly high upon the pages of Science, and whose words, well-weighed and freighted with the results of close and laborious investigation, find attentive listeners. There are active members of this body who are distinguished in particular walks of Science above their fellows. Agassiz in Natural History, Mitchell and Alexander in Astronomy, Bache and Henry in Physics, Peirce in Mathematics, the brothers Rogers and their co-worker Hall in Geology, the Sillimans in Chemistry, will stand as examples. They are all men to whom men willingly do honor.

But there is another point from which the body may be observed. It is not in the carefulness of investigation, nor in elegant diction, nor in polished manner, that the American Association is to find that strength which it deserves to acquire, if, with these acquirements in full perfection, a sentiment of jealousy is permitted to mingle in the current of its life. The published accounts of the proceedings at Cleveland, at Washington, and at this last meeting at Providence, taken in connection with the impressions made upon the minds of persons who were in attendance throughout, point to the existence of a state of feeling among the great body of the Association which may sap its usefulness, undermine its foundations, and destroy the prestige which it was beginning to acquire.

Of late years it has become customary to admit as members of the Association all persons, scientific and unscientific, who promise to obey certain rules, pay a certain sum annually, and advance the interests of science as best they could. With this crowd (there are now some fifteen hundred members) came a party of young investigators. Between the two stools—the purely unscientific and the ultra-scientific—the body seems to be in danger of falling to the ground.

A high degree of excitement was created at the last session by the introduction of a new Constitution. Members indulged in personalities. Much hard feeling existed. The harmony of the body was seriously disturbed, and peace was made with some difficulty. These and other instances show the existence of a secret bad feeling. There are elements of discord, and occasionally, as at Providence, the bad blood breaks out. Those who have observed with interest the progress of the Association, cannot refrain from regrets that such occasions should arise.

It appears to be conceded by all parties that the Standing Committee is the governing power of the Association. It directs all the movements. None of its decrees are negatived. It is composed of a class of men whose word is as their bond. Were this Committee to exclude altogether matter which is crude, elementary, or purely technical in its nature, is it not probable that much of the present trouble would be removed? But to admit papers, to allow them to be read and then to refuse to publish, is a course which naturally rouses up bad blood, and sends it bubbling and hissing through the offended man's veins.

There is a single point besides. The published volume of Proceedings at the Washington meeting shows that of the papers presented, fifty-four were not furnished for publication. As a signal instance, we have taken the trouble to analyze the omissions:

On Astronomy	5
On Mechanics and Physics	5
On Physics of the Globe	5
On Meteorology	7
On Geodesy and Navigation	2
On Chemistry	9
On Natural History	4
On Geology, &c	18
Total	54

The Proceedings of a learned body are looked to for the record of its discoveries and observations. Is there any particular value to be attached to a volume of Proceedings which announces simply the titles of papers, and adds an announcement in a single italic line, of "Not Received?"

Danish Troubles—Privateering.

Serious apprehensions are beginning to be felt in relation to the difficulties between Denmark and the United States, which, it is now generally believed, must lead to a rupture and to hostilities. In such case the danger to American commerce is not in the Danish fleet, which, though but little inferior to our own in numbers, is undoubtedly inferior in quality, and would soon be driven from the sea by our Navy. The danger, if any, is from privateers. The Danes are a race of sailors, and have, from the remotest times, shown great propensity and talent for privateering. The injury done to British commerce during the war of 1807-'14, merely by Danish privateers, was prodigious. Insurances to the Baltic and to the North Sea, at that time, rose to enormous figures, notwithstanding that Denmark, by one blow, had been deprived of its whole fleet, and crippled in all its resources. There is danger in this, because all the advantages of the privateering system will be on the enemy's side. And it is difficult to see any ground on which any European Power could interfere, after the declaration made by President Pierce in his Message, dated December 4, 1854, in which he says:

"The King of Prussia entirely approves of the project of a treaty to the same effect submitted to him, but proposes an additional article providing for the renunciation of privateering. Such an article, for most obvious reasons, is much desired by nations having naval establishments, large in proportion to their foreign commerce. If it were adopted as an international rule, the commerce of nations having, comparatively, a small naval force, would be very much at the mercy of their enemies in case of war with a power of decided naval superiority. The bare statement of the condition in which the United States would be placed after having surrendered the right to resort to privateers in the event of war with a belligerent of naval supremacy, will show that this Government could never listen to such a proposition."

These views will, it is feared, be found very available by the Danes, for whom they were not enunciated.

Socialism.

We would publish the article of "Querist" but for the fact that it would lead to a profitless controversy. It is quite true, as he states, that the doctrine of Passional Attraction, which the book, Mary Lyndon, was written to illustrate and commend, is an essential part of the system of Social Reform known as Fourierism, which was introduced into this country by Mr. Brisbane, first in a volume, and afterwards with much greater effect through the columns of the Tribune. In Fourier's theory of Society as expounded by himself, it constituted the very pivot and turning point of the whole system. Brisbane also adopted it and pressed it strongly, in his book and in the Tribune, as the only basis of a true Society. The Editorial discussions of Fourierism in the Tribune evaded this branch of the subject, and dwelt mainly upon its economical relations and the doctrine of attraction as applied to Labor. Nor are we aware that in the Roxbury Community, a Fourier establishment, with which two of the present conductors of the Tribune were connected, any attempt was made to apply this theory of Passional Attraction to practical life. In Parke Godwin's exposition of Fourier's system, however, it is clearly and strongly presented as an integral part of the general scheme.

The Tribune was undoubtedly far more influential than all other agencies, in gaining public attention and favor for Fourier's Social theories, and until quite lately, was active and zealous in their advocacy. Since the publication of the Daily Times was commenced, it has given this subject much less prominence than before. But during the six or eight years which it devoted to the Fourier crusade, it did much to familiarize the public mind with the general subject, and thus to prepare the way for the bolder demonstrations in the same direction which have followed in the regular course of things. Mr. Stephen Pearl Andrews afterwards occupied the columns of the Tribune with an extended advocacy of the theory that Marriage was the "annihilation of woman,"—and the Editor of that paper not only gave room to his arguments, but called special attention to them in extended replies and comments.

Under these circumstances, we are in the same predicament with our correspondent "Querist," in not being able to see the pertinence of the Tribune's recent article, censuring Editorial denunciations of books in which such immoral theories are urged upon public notice. The same view of the subject, we remember, was presented by a correspondent of the Tribune, who feared harm might come from its elaborate expositions of the fighting qualities, achievements and companionships of the late Bill Poole; but the Tribune replied Editorially with a good deal of force and still more vehemence, combatting the policy of keeping silent about such matters, and insisting on the beneficial results of free publicity and sharp public censure. Whether the Tribune has changed its opinions upon this subject, or only objects to our acting upon them, we are not able to say. Fortunately, it is a matter of very little consequence, and "Querist" will not be paid for his trouble in the prosecution of his researches.

Kansas.

The telegraph reports an important movement in Kansas towards calling a Convention to organize a State government and apply for admission into the Union. The Convention was held at Lawrence on the 14th inst., and was attended by about six hundred persons. It seems to have been unanimous in its condemnation of the present Legislature, and determined to resist all attempts to execute the pretended laws it may enact. A State Convention was called for the 5th of September. This looks as if all freedom and independence of action had not yet been "crushed out" by the Missouri invaders.

Furnace Dealers.

A correspondent referring to a recent article in the Times upon the insecurity of our dwelling houses, and their being particularly exposed to fire, takes exception to the intimation that furnace dealers are as a general thing, responsible for this defect. Some of them, he concedes, are exceedingly and culpably careless in their manner of doing their work; and it is to the neglect of the Insurance agents, and the Fire Marshal, in not being careful to discriminate in this matter, and thus to warn the public against those furnaces which are unsafe, that he attributes the fault to a very great degree. Their reports are vague and indefinite, and neither throw any light on the case under consideration, nor afford the slightest warning for the future. Owners, too, he thinks are exceedingly culpable for employing architects,—and architects for employing builders,—who contract to do the work for a fixed sum, and whose main effort will, of course, be to have it done for the lowest possible sum of money, and who are thus constantly tempted to neglect all precautions needed for safety.

Where is much force in these suggestions, and great good sense in the following practical instructions with which the communication (too long for our columns,) closes:

"Let owners take their own business into their own hands. Let them deal directly with the men whose services they require. Let them select that every furnace dealer, in common with other tradesmen, is entitled to a fair profit on the goods he sells and the labor he performs. Let them select men whose standing is known, who have a business reputation to protect. Let them conduct their negotiation on the principle that trade is only profitable when mutually advantageous to buyer and seller, and our word for it they will receive better work, at fairer prices, and experience less loss from the destruction of their newly finished houses."

Sydney Smith on Teetotalism.

Sydney Smith, in spite of his reputation and habits as a diner-out, gives some very excellent advice on the subject of Temperance. In one of his letters he says he never knew a gentleman who ate or drank as little as was good for his health. In the following epistle to Lady Holland he speaks still more decidedly in favor of abstinence from all fermented liquors;—his advice is sensible:

My Dear Lady Holland: Many thanks for your kind anxiety respecting my health. I not only was never better, but never half so well; indeed, I find I have been very ill all my life, without knowing it. Let me state some of the goods arising from abstaining from all fermented liquors. First, sweet sleep; having never known what sweet sleep was, I sleep like a baby or a plowboy. If I wake, no needless terrors, no black visions of life, but pleasing hopes and recollections: Holland House past and to come! If I dream, it is not of lions and tigers, but of Easter dues and tithes. Secondly, I can take longer walks and make greater exertions without fatigue. My understanding is improved, and I comprehend political economy. I see better without wine and spectacles than when I used both. Only one evil ensues from it; I am in such extravagant spirits that I must lose blood, or look out for some one who will bore and depress me. Pray leave off wine—the stomach quite at rest; no heartburn, no pain, no distension. Yours, Sydney Smith.

☞ The Commercial Advertiser copies articles commending Ex-Governor Hunt's letter from seven papers published within this State, and from one other in Massachusetts, and draws from them the consoling inference that the Whig party is still alive and strong. One fact in this connection seems to have escaped its notice. Of the New-York papers quoted from, one (the Buffalo Courier) is an organ of the Hunker Democrats, and the other six are only waiting a favorable opportunity to sell the Whig party to the Know-Nothings; being every one of them earnestly and actively devoted to the interests of that party. Is this the best possible quarter to look to for Whig counsel? Is Governor Hunt in the habit of relying on the Albany Register, Rochester American, and Buffalo Commercial, for endorsement and approval?

☞ A London literary journal, The Critic, noticing the publication of The Star Papers, says: "Mr. H. W. Beecher, who is, we believe, a brother of Mrs. Stowe, presuming, we suppose, on her popularity, has published the volume." There is no reason why this should not be sensible enough in London, but it sounds very much like a joke here. The same Critic adds that "there is no novelty of thought or observation in them,—only old thoughts are put in a pleasant shape." What more can be said of any book now-a-days?

H. N. Wild, R. N. Senatorial Candidate.

The Fifth Senatorial District Committee met at the Mercer House on Wednesday night. There was quite a collection of the choice spirits, who held the door against all would-be intruders. At a short time before midnight accounts were received which told of a noisy but active contest in which many candidates had been overthrown. Our Reporter says that Mr. Wedgewood had 7 votes for Senator out of the 15, for 40 consecutive ballotings. The remaining 8 being divided between Dugan, Holden and Farrington. Over 50 ballotings were held, and at last Councilman (and candy-man) H. N. Wild was elected. This District is the one now represented by Mark Spencer.

☞ At a meeting of the Committee of the American Democracy, held at the Westchester House, the following persons were reported by the delegates as having been nominated for Aldermen:

Sixth Ward—Michael McLaughlin. Fourteenth Ward—Michael Tourney. Sixteenth Ward—W. J. Hasbet. Eighteenth Ward—Charles Partridge. Twentieth Ward—John Orser. Twenty second Ward—Henry Lebneau.

Rachel.

Mdlle. Rachel left the St. Nicholas Hotel yesterday. She has taken for her residence, during her engagement in New-York, No. 5 Clinton-place. Mons. Raphael Felix, we learn, made application to rent the house in Fourteenth-street, occupied by Grisi and Mario while here. M. Raphael Felix and the father have taken apartments at Maillard's, on Broadway. The troup of artists announced as arriving yesterday in the Pacific, in company with Mdlle. Rachel, are to remain at Madame Mordon's, corner Broome and Elm streets.

At a late hour Wednesday night a select party of amateur musicians tendered Mdlle. Rachel a fine serenade. A large crowd were in attendance, but Mdlle. Rachel did not appear.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

NEW PRINCIPLE! NEW REMEDY! NO POISON! RHODES' FEVER AND AGUE CURE, is the NATURAL ANTIDOTE to Malaria, which will entirely [illegible] any resident or traveler, even in the most sickly or swampy localities, from any form or fever and ague whatever.

It will instantly check the ague in persons who have suffered for any length of time, from one day to twenty years, so that they need never have another chill, by taking it in the manner according to directions. The patient at once begins to recover appetite and strength, and continues until a complete and radical cure is effected.

Furthermore, its surprising efficacy is equally shown by its singular antagonism, and so powerful is its effect, the following testimonials from the most reliable and eminent in the United States is attached to every bottle:

New-York, June 11, 1855.

I have made a chemical examination of "RHODES' FEVER AND AGUE CURE," or "ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA," and have tested it for Arsenic, Mercury, Quinine, and Strychnine, but have not found a particle of either in it. I found my inheritance in the composition, that would be injurious to the constitution.

JAMES R. CHILTON, M. D., Chemist.

Some of the most remarkable cures made in New-York have been of persons who have derived only temporary relief from the best of other remedies offered for sale, and I beg leave to suggest to ague sufferers that it is better to try the only harmless remedy first.

GEORGE H. DAVIS, Wholesale Agent, No. 100 Fulton-st. And for sale by C. H. RING, C. N. CHICKERING & CO., F. C. WELLS & Co., Brooklyn, Mrs. M. HAYES, and druggists generally throughout the United States.

FEVER AND AGUE AND DYSPEPSIA.—PERSONS suffering from either of these diseases should apply immediately at ROSENBOOM'S ORIENTAL BITTERS. The only medicine now before the public that will effect a cure without permanently those who take it. This [illegible] is not a popular nostrum, but a genuine remedy that will cure in some one of every 10, where directions are followed. The money will be refunded in all cases where it fails. It sells at $1 a bottle, by the Agent F. S. STRONG, No. 48 Broadway-st. For particulars, call and get circulars or see an advertisement in the New-York Dispatch.

HECKER'S FARINA IS RESTORATIVE, strengthening the digestive and abundant remedy in disordered bowels, even in diarrhea, dysentery and cholera. Farina prepared under a patented process, is nutritious, healthy, and salutary. To be had of grocers and druggists. Wholesale of HECKER & BRO., Cortlandt-st., No. 2, Cherry-st., New-York.

VALUE OF RICH'S IMPROVED WILDER'S SALAMANDER SAFES.

A fire of the 3d inst. which destroyed the brick building occupied by Mr. John F. Trow, opposite the Gas Works in the City, gave a severe test to the properties, containing the books, papers and effects of Mr. Thomas; and although the building was destroyed, it opened the safes in which the contents were found undisturbed, and in the same condition as when they were placed there, except a few damp spots on the outside of the cards of a few papers and the backs of one or two of the books caused by the heat generated in the fire, which is the greatest test of the value of the Salamander Safe.

Crops and Beef Cattle in Pennsylvania—The New Railroad from Philadelphia to Baltimore, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

OXFORD, Chester Co., Pa., Tuesday, Aug. 14, 1855.

Our crops of wheat, oats and potatoes this year have been very large, and as the last census showed 1,000,000 as the product of wheat in Lancaster and Chester Counties, Pa., this year the yield will not fall much below 2,000,000 bushels in these counties. Corn promises well, and is almost out of the reach of casualties.

Our county has been a grazing district, and we send large numbers of fat cattle during the Winter months to New-York market. In looking over your list last Winter, I counted one-half the fat cattle on sale one market-day from Chester County. We will not be able to send so many this Winter. The dry Spring gave us little pasture, and not much over half a crop of hay, and there has not been the usual number of stock cattle bought this season. Another thing may diminish the number of cattle driven to your market and tend to keep up the price of beef. The bridges over the Susquehanna River are not in traveling order, and will not be repaired this season. Virginia cattle, that used to be driven in great numbers from the Baltimore market on to Philadelphia and New-York, must go, if at all, by the Philadelphia and Baltimore Railroad. As the tolls are high and the means of transportation limited, only the top of the market has been sent on; hence beef is much lower in Baltimore than in either Philadelphia or New-York. It is not likely that the surplus of the Baltimore market will be sent on, as the crossing of the Susquehanna River by boat in the Philadelphia and Baltimore Railroad does not admit of large cattle trains.

It seems not to be generally known, or I have seen no notice of it in the TIMES, that another Railroad is in rapid progress between Baltimore and Philadelphia—"The Philadelphia and Baltimore Central." The grading and bridging is going on rapidly, and the Pennsylvania end will be ready for the superstructure this Fall, and part of the Maryland end is under contract. The road will open up to market a good agricultural region both in Pennsylvania and Maryland, and the farmers know their own interest in urging it through. The stock, I understand, is entirely subscribed by the farmers on the line of the road.

I am pleased to see that you purpose devoting a larger portion of your paper to agricultural interests. The statistical information and general knowledge on the subject, disseminated, will be of great use both to the consumer and producer.

Yours, truly, D.

Agricultural—Readiness to Sell Lands.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: From whatever cause it may arise, our farmers do not sufficiently identify themselves with the lands they cultivate. They seem not to possess that association of feelings with their fields and homesteads which is necessary to that proper pride without which the farmer is a mere laborer. There is scarcely a farmer in our country but what, if you will offer him a good price for his lands, will sell them to you without a moment's hesitation; and without a word or look which could lead you to think that those trees, fields, or familiar walls, were in any measure the objects of his affections. Once upon a time, as all men know, a poor Arab, to save his wife and children from starvation, sold his horse for a pile of gold. He delivered him to the buyer, clutched his money, and with tears trembling in his eyes, looked at his horse. Instantly dashing the gold to the ground he bounded to the horse's back, and he and his steed were in a moment out of sight. He could not sell his horse. To do so was to him as though he were selling a part of himself. It is affirmed that this horse, with this man upon his back, could pass over a mile in a minute; and why could he travel with such wonderful celerity? Was it not because the affections of the man were so centered in him that the noble animal felt his master's kindness, and in obedience to that masters will, strained every nerve and muscle to do all that it was possible for him to accomplish? Had this horse been ridden by his late purchaser instead of the man that loved him, could he thus have flown as on the wind? Just so it is with the farm and the farmer. If he will allow his affections to take no hold upon his farm,—if he will not allow his spirit to become, as it were, incorporated with that house, that barn-yard and those barns,—with that garden and orchard,—with those fruits, and flowers, and fields, he may depend upon it that his farm will never compare favorably, either as to yield or beauty, with its full capacity of productiveness.

Yours truly, W. D.

ALBANY, Thursday, Aug. 9, 1855.

Are Small Loaves Irremediable?—A Word for the Bakers.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I was passing along the street, and I saw a boy throw a pebble at another boy. It struck him, and the offender dodged unperceived behind a tree. The injured boy turned furiously around, and seeing a third boy indulging in immoderate mirth at the occurrence, concluded that he was the offender, whereupon he seized him, and inflicted upon him a severe kicking before he could be brought to listen to reason.

I applied that incident to the present case. The public pay for dear bread, and are equally precipitate at jumping at a conclusion. They buy their loaves of the baker, and he receives their money in return. Flour is quoted at such and such rates. Who causes the excessive enhancement? The baker, of course, for he is in sight—others hiding behind the tree are never called in question.

I should have thought, Mr. Editor, that the experience and logic implied in your views by your position would have prevented you charging upon the bakers excessive profits without first examining the subject. No man knows better than you that excessive profits are incompatible with competition, and that competition in retail trading in New-York is pervading, unceasing, ruinous even. The same law that determines the price of a newspaper and the price of a stage fare prescribes the size of a loaf. A man must keep up with the current as he drifts adown. If you cannot give as a good daily sheet for two cents, some one else will, and he too will patronize. If I cannot give the public as large a loaf and as good in quality as is compatible for a living profit, some deportment will and my shop will be deserted. I am situated in a locality [illegible] in this City, my manage is economy, my business fast; and I cannot pay

[illegible]

NEW-JERSEY.

Hunterdon County Bible Society.

A few hours' ride along the route of the Central Railroad takes one to the pleasant rural village of Clinton, embowered among the limestone hills which skirt the banks of the Raritan. The scenery throughout this whole section of the State is exceedingly varied and beautiful. The views from the high grounds are very extensive indeed, while the vail eye are watered by purling streams, and smile luxuriantly in the light of the morning sun.

The agricultural interests of this section of the State have been materially improved during the last few years. The use of lime has renovated much of the worn-out land, and greatly benefitted that which never was good—so that much of the land here looks as thrifty as that of any other section of country. At the same time there is much land here, which in its present condition is not worth cultivation, and which one might well hesitate to receive as a gift—especially if obliged to procure his living from it. Lands have quadrupled in value, at least in the estimation of their owners. You will hear of building lots of an acre, and even half an acre, being held at $200, where there happens to be a little cluster of houses, called a village, which bears every evidence of decay, and has no element of prosperity, no foundation for town pretensions. The price of land is often put of all proportion to the receipts it will bring. For instance we have heard of a farm of nearly 130 acres, which the owner accounts worth $50 per acre the whole of which, with good buildings, brings a rental of only $125—less than two per cent. on the valuation. This village is the great lime market for this region. The adjacent hills are being turned to good account in furnishing this fertilizer for the surrounding country. There is a flourishing flour-mill here, having four run of stone; and also an old oil mill, which in former times used to consume 15,000 bushels of flax annually. Now that quantity of flax is scarcely raised in the whole of West Jersey. The farmers, generally, cannot raise it, the land having been too much exhausted in former years. Although the railroad does not approach the village nearer than two miles, yet it has given a great spur to improvement here. A large part of the village looks new, the houses are neat and well painted, and everything looks flourishing. The great inducement to our coming here, as well as that of others, was the annual meeting of the Hunterdon County Bible Society, which occurred on Tuesday. This drew together a goodly number of the clergy and other friends of this cause from various parts of the county. The meeting was opened with a sermon by Rev. Dr. KIRKPATRICK, of Amwell, on "The signs of the times," as indicating the prevalence of Christ's Kingdom. Interesting addresses were made by Judge ROBISON, of Belvidere, President of the Warren County Bible Society, and also by Rev. Dr. RODGERS, of Boundbrook, Delegate representing the Somerset County Bible Society. The annual donations and collections from the churches were received, and amounted in the aggregate to over $1,000, and will reach fully $1,100 when all are paid in. Thus the Society has more than redeemed its pledge to raise $1,000 the present year. This is $200 more than has been raised any previous year. Thus the agricultural sections are coming up to the help of this great cause, and contributing of their abundance to supply the lack caused by the prostration of business in our cities. This County Society is one of the oldest in the State, having been formed in 1816, and after being connected for two years with the New-Jersey State Society, became auxiliary to the American Bible Society in 1818. It has contributed to the Parent Society nearly $5,000 since that period, besides supplying the County several times. The next annual meeting was appointed to be held at Milford. After the election of officers the Society adjourned, well pleased with the few hours spent in their deliberations, and with the hospitality so cheerfully accorded to them by the inhabitants of this rural village.

A Pic-Nic of the Common Schools.

It was our late good fortune to attend the annual Pic-nic held on Wednesday by the Schools of the town of Readington in Hunterdon. The occasion has been long anticipated by all the people of this section with great pleasure—Providence favoring, the day was beautiful, and being a little cloudy, was more favorable to this object. The Pic nic was held in a grove some three miles from the White House Depôt, a most quiet and delightful retreat. This was no ordinary Pic-nic, whether we regard the number in attendance, the distinguished persons who participated in the exercises, the perfect order maintained, or the interest which was sustained during the whole day.

There were between three and four thousand people assembled from all parts of this and even many adjacent towns—the whole surrounding population nearly turned out to attend this assembly, making many of the neighborhoods appear deserted, and conveying the idea that it was Sunday, and that all the people had gone to Church.

There were twelve Schools in attendance, nine of which were from this town. The children of these Schools were exercised in singing and recitations, in which they showed themselves familiar, and imparted a most minute account of all the geographical features of this County.

Addresses were made in the morning by JOHN H. PHILIPS, M. D., Superintendent of Schools for the State of New-Jersey, and by A. C. HOAGLAND, M. D., Secretary of the State Teachers' Association of New-Jersey. While these exercises were being held, Governor PRICE was announced as coming, and in a few moments he appeared, accompanied by Hon. RICHARD P. THOMPSON, Attorney-General of the State, Hon. DAVID NAGE, of Trenton, Mr. WILLIAM H. PHILIPS, Principal of the State Normal School, and others. The Governor was received with joyous welcome by the assembled multitude, and a formal speech by Mr. JOHN B. THOMPSON, one of the former teachers of the town. He replied to them in happy terms, and thanked the audience for the evidences of esteem with which they had greeted him.

The dinner hour having arrived, the assembly separated from before the stand, and the scholars with their friends, repaired to their respective refreshment tables. Above a dozen of these had been prepared at various points in the grove, of ample dimensions, and most beautifully supplied with the good things of this life, so essential to the welfare of the inner man, and with which (thanks to a kind Providence) the land teems in this section. Ample justice was done to these provisions, the skin and remains of the morning having prepared the humanity to enjoy them. After the repast, speeches were delivered at almost all these tables to attentive circles by various guests.

The intermission being called the assembly were again called together. Interesting addresses were made by the Governor, Attorney-General THOMPSON, Judge NAGE and Mr. PHILIPS. In all these the speakers took occasion to commend the State Normal School, which has, singularly enough, found many opponents in this county. That of Judge NAGE was particularly humorous, and consequently the speaker became a great favorite with the audience.

The exercises closed with the benediction, and singing by the children. We have never seen anything of this kind so well conducted. Every preparation seemed to have been made to make all the exercises perfect. Judge THOMPSON, the Town Superintendent, deserves great credit for the able manner in which he presided and directed all the proceedings. The entire absence of the police prevented any disturbance; and the whole evening passed off in the most happy manner, and the audience separated highly delighted. It was certainly a proud day for "old Hunterdon," on which she could produce such an array at an annual gathering of the Schools in one of her towns.

[Jersey City Police.

The services of the day police force ended on the 20th inst., until again put upon duty. They have been doing duty by authority of the Common Council Committee on Police and Licenses, and must be again reinstated by the Mayor or the Committee. The machinery of the Police system is not yet fully in operation.

JUDGE SHANKLAND AND THE MAINE LAW—THE LAW HELD CONSTITUTIONAL.—We learn that Judge SHANKLAND, in his charge to the Grand Jury at Ithaca, on Monday of this week, gave it as his opinion, that the Prohibitory Liquor law of this State is constitutional, and that the sale of imported liquors, except in the original packages, is forbidden by the law, and that it was the duty of the Grand Jury to sustain the law until it should be pronounced unconstitutional by the Courts having authority to pass upon that question.

Binghamton Republican, Aug. 23.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully Reported for Rose-Lawn Steam Times.

THURSDAY, AUG. 23—6 P. M.

ASHES—Are salable and steady at $6 37½ for Pearls, and $6 25 for Pots, ⅌ 100 lbs.

COFFEE—Remains very dull, much the day's sales indicating 350 bags Java at 14½c.; 125 bags Maracaibo at 12½c. alike; 50 Laguayra at 11½c.@11¾c.; and 270 Rio at 10½c.@11½c. ⅌ lb.

COTTON—The Pacific's advices have not sensibly affected the market, which remains dull and heavy, with a limited inquiry at our revised quotations:

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.	Gulf.	Florida.	Mobile.	New-Orleans and Texas.
Ordinary, ⅌ lb.	9½	9½	9¾	9¾
Middling	11	11	11	11¼
Middling Fair	11¼	—	12½	12½
Fair	12½	12½	13	13½

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western brands are in lively request for home use and shipment, at slightly improved rates for common and medium grades, and previous full prices for the finer description. The receipts are not equal to the current sales, and these are reducing the supply in market. This day's business consists of 9,000 bbls., within our range:

Interior State	$7 87½@$8 00
Ordinary State	8 00 @ 8 12½
Straight State	8 12½@ 8 25
Favorite and Extra State	8 25 @ 8 37½
Mixed Western	8 50 @ 8 62½
Common to good Indiana and Michigan	8 62½@ 8 87½
Fancy Michigan	8 90 @ 9 00
Common to Good Ohio	8 90 @ 9 37½
Fancy Ohio	9 00 @ 9 25
Extra Ohio	9 37½@11 00
Extra Indiana and Michigan	9 25 @10 00
Fancy Genesee	9 25 @10 00
Extra Genesee	11 00 @12 00

Canadian has not varied. The day's business consists of 500 bbls. superfine to extra at $8 25@$10 50 ⅌ bbl. Southern continues dull and drooping. The day's transactions add up 1,400 bbls. mixed to extra at $8 50@$10 ⅌ bbl. Rye Flour is pretty freely offered, and can be had at $6@$6 75 for fine and superfine, ⅌ bbl. Corn Meal is rare, and held at $4 75 for Jersey, and $5 for Brandywine, ⅌ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat is more freely offered at easier rates, without being sought after with greater freedom. The day's business has been confined to 13,000 bushels Southern, at $2@$2 10 for white; $1 95 for yellow or amber colored, and $1 91@$1 92½ for red, ⅌ bushel. Rye is in improved demand, and has been purchased to the extent of 1,000 bushels, at $1 09@$1 05 ⅌ bushel, on the spot. To arrive, it is in request at $1 ⅌ bushel. Barley and Oats are without any particular change. Corn is actively inquired for, and it exhibits a rising tenor. The receipts are lighter, and receivers seem less eager to sell. The day's transactions embrace 53,000 bushels Western mixed at 80c.@80c. for sound, and 86c. for unmerchantable, ⅌ bushel.

HAY—Sales transpired to day of only 200 bales new, at 60c.@75c. ⅌ 100 lbs.

HOPS—Remain quite dull and languid, with a moderate supply in market.

IRON—Scotch Pig is in request at $22@$23, usual terms, ⅌ ton, but there is not much offering at such figures—holders anticipating better prices—the stock here being reduced, while the advices from England point to increased cost. Other descriptions are unchanged.

LATHS—Have not varied essentially.

LEAD—Is in better demand and is quoted firm at $5 25 for Galena, and $6 12½ for foreign, ⅌ 100 lbs.

LIME—Rockland is quiet and languid, though not abundant, at 87½c. for Common, and $1 25 for Lump, ⅌ bbl.

MOLASSES—There were 300 bbls. New-Orleans taken, in lots, at 36c. ⅌ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Rosin, Tar, and Crude Turpentine were without alteration. Spirits Turpentine is in rather slack request, and is heavy, at 41c.@43c. ⅌ gallon.

OILS—Whale, Sperm, and Olive remain as last noticed. Linseed is selling slowly at 62c.@65c. ⅌ gallon, the previous quotations. Lard Oil is quiet, but firm.

PROVISIONS—Pork is still more inquired for and is dearer,—the sales of the day amounting to 2,500 bbls. at $20 75@$21 50 for new Mess; $16 50@$19 for new Prime; and $20 50@$21 for old Mess,—closing with but little, if any, to be had, under our highest figures. The receipts are quite limited, and the heavy daily sales are diminishing the stock on hand. Hence, sellers have the advantage. Cut Meats continue very scarce and in demand, at 11c. for Hams, and 9½c.@9¾c. for Shoulders, ⅌ lb. Lard has not varied much; the day's sales include 200 bbls. and tcs. fair to prime, at 11¼c.@11½c. ⅌ lb. Beef is doing better; 400 bbls. were disposed of during the day at $11 for Prime; $11 75@$13 for Country Mess; $15 75@$16 25 for repacked Mess, and $17 for extra, &c., ⅌ bbl. Prime Mess Beef is in demand within a range of from $21@$25 ⅌ tc. Beef Hams remain inactive and languid, at from $15@$16 ⅌ bbl. Butter is in demand at 15c.@17c. for Ohio; 19c.@20c. for ordinary to good State, and 24c.@26c. for choice do., ⅌ lb. Cheese is selling at from 8c.@9c. ⅌ lb.

RICE—Is quiet and depressed. A few small lots changed hands within our former range, but no important sales have been effected, as parties disagree about prices.

SUGARS—Present no really novel feature. The day's sales embrace 750 hhds. Cuba Muscovado at 6½c.@7½c.; and small parcels of other kinds at former quotations.

TALLOW—There have been 10,000 lbs. prime sold at 12½c.@12¾c. ⅌ lb.

WHISKY—We heard that 450 bbls. Ohio and Prison found buyers at 45c. ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Varied little. For Liverpool, the engagements were limited, including Cotton at 5-32d. ⅌ lb.; Grain at 9d.@9½d. ⅌ bushel; and deal freight at 15s.@17s. 6d. ⅌ ton. For London, there were also only light shipments effected, and rates were nominally the same. Nothing really new for other ports.

Albany Lumber Market,

For the Week ending Wednesday, Aug. 22.

There has been a fair trade for the past week in Lumber, though it has not been very active. Some descriptions of Lumber are accumulating in the market, and the assortment is now good. Some Eastern buyers have commenced laying in their stocks for the Winter, as the manufacturers are commencing operations, and the prospect for a good trade is favorable. There has been no change in prices, and dealers are firm at previous quotations, anticipating an advance to at least an equal extent with the expected rise in freights when the harvest comes forward.

The receipts by canal, from the 14th to the 21st of August, in the years named, were as follows:

	Boards and Scantling, feet.	Shingles. M.	Timber, C. feet.	Spars, No.
1850	6,246,000	664	—	4,735,270
1851	7,014,200	252	4,610	6,650,600
1852	10,808,065	30,131	—	4,723,850
1853	12,398,914	203	—	6,023,480
1854	7,655,000	253	—	2,077,000
1855	6,609,011	1,366	—	7,094,400

The receipts of Boards and Scantling for the six days in the third canal week in August show an increase over the corresponding days of last season of 646,013 feet. If we rightly remember, this is the first time this season that the receipts of the same number of days have exceeded or equaled those of the same period last season. It will also be seen that there is a large excess in Shingles and Boards the former exceeding those of last season by 1,052 M., and the latter 5,616,720 feet. This was not anticipated for at this time, and it may probably not occur again this season, for the harvest will soon be moving toward the sea coast market places.

The receipts by canal, from the opening of navigation to the 21st of August, in the years named, were as follows:

Skids Defended.

A correspondent defends skids across the sidewalk against the abuse of "East Jersey." He says:

"I sold to-day four hogsheads of sugar and two of [illegible]. Hardware we do not deal in. The hogsheads [illegible] to the door, and the cartman then put [illegible] and the goods rolled on his cart. The [illegible] occupied in about two minutes. Now, as [illegible] to be 'East Jersey's' wish, we will [illegible] him and his 1,001 passengers, and dispense with our skids. One hogshead of sugar is sold, and [illegible] to shipped; well, we roll it out on the walk. How is our customer to get this on his cart? Why, [illegible] way for him is to take two of his range [illegible] in, which are about as long as the original [illegible] Then he must have at least six men to roll it on his cart. Now the whole sidewalk is [illegible] with our goods, and the hogshead shipped, [illegible] the hogshead on range will slip and [illegible] and the contents were [illegible] to be totally barked." [illegible] ladies come [illegible] over the skids.

[illegible] A correspondent of the Chronicle is opposed to the policy of allowing Church Conventions to be held in the Churches. The mint and excise tax in the Churches office must be a profitable revenue for somebody.

The Perils of Yachting.

Last Friday morning a party of ladies and gentlemen, among whom were our friend and fellow-journeyman, Wendell P. Dunham, a son of Dr. Mott, Dr. [illegible] and others, left Hunter's Sunnyside, and took a sail in a yacht for a pleasure excursion down Jamaica Bay, and on to the "broad and deep blue [illegible]." Summerset, and two [illegible] of New-Lotts, and [illegible] and on to the "broad and deep blue [illegible]." Summerset, and two [illegible] of New-Lotts, and [illegible] Bay, Rockaway Beach, &c., and return [illegible] the same evening. [illegible] By noon the blue sneak of [illegible] had not beaten was scarcely visible in the [illegible] and to an inquiry of one of the ladies, the [illegible] said they were steering toward Fire Island [illegible] "Four o'clock brought them to the inlet; [illegible] were by this time quite strong, and the white [illegible] were dancing and prancing over the surface of the [illegible] the lumber on the hill side. The "breakers [illegible] near," and the surf was rolling in with tremendous [illegible] power, when, to endeavoring to steer his little craft through the inlet, the pilot run her "smack on the [illegible]. She careened a little on one side, rose and fell, [illegible] and hoped like a young horse in a snowstorm, but finally settled down nearly still, the sea [illegible] her down at every surge. Here was a fix. The pilot gave up in despair; the ladies looked around [illegible] for Mr. Shaw to hang a rope on, [illegible] the fortune were blessed no gentleman [illegible] shot, pack and all. [illegible] the night and until near noon on Saturday, when their [illegible] was discovered by the wreckers of Fire Island, and all were rescued from their perilous situation, and safely landed in the boat, where they remained until [illegible] they all arrived safely at 3 o'clock in the [illegible]. Our lady readers can imagine the plight the ladies were in, after being drenched by the sea all night on Friday night, and were compelled to travel through sand and dust, and remain without a change of clothing until Monday. We rather suspect they won't go to Fire Island beach this year—and that way, at any rate.—Dem Rock.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—Aug. 22.

Before Hon. Judge Clerke.

[illegible] vs. [illegible]—In this action [illegible] the plaintiff sues to recover the sum of $12,000 [illegible] the defendant to make the necessary [illegible] to enable the plaintiff to [illegible] a certain lot of land, which he claims to be [illegible] under a contract of purchase, [illegible] the defendant. The defendant [illegible] the plaintiff's claim, and [illegible] a counterclaim for the purchase money [illegible] of the premises, which he claims to be [illegible] the plaintiff. The plaintiff [illegible] the counterclaim, and [illegible] the defendant's claim, on the ground that the [illegible] of the contract, which the defendant [illegible] to perform, was the conveyance of a good and marketable title, which the defendant was unable to make. The plaintiff
